The Canadian government should work to silence her, based on bill M-103 passed by the Trudeau government. Is she guilty of discrimination? Or making a legitimate point.

Note the quote: "she knows what she has done. Those who reap, sow."

No religion should be a "sacred cow" singled out for protection. We already had freedom of religion long before M-103 made being a Muslim somehow more special and more worthy of protection.

All people should be free to practice their religion, but not all religious practices are worthy of respect, and some are worthy of criticism and even derision and ridicule. Even if that hurts some people's feelings.
