

No. VLC-S-S-252688

Vancouver Registry

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF BRITISH COLUMBIA
IN THE MATTER OF A STATUTORY APPEAL
PURSUANT TO: Section 40 of the HEALTH PROFESSIONS ACT [RSBC 1996] Chapter 183

BETWEEN:

AMY HAMM

PETITIONER

AND

BRITISH COLUMBIA COLLEGE OF NURSES AND MIDWIVES

RESPONDENT

AFFIDAVIT OF COLIN POSTMA

I, Colin Postma, interim Executive Director for the Association for Reformed Political Action (ARPA) Canada, of the City of Gatineau in the Province of Quebec, MAKE OATH AND SAY AS FOLLOWS:

1. I am the interim Executive Director of the Association for Reformed Political Action (ARPA) Canada. I have held this position since January 2026. I am also ARPA's Director of Communications, a position that I have held since March 2023. Prior to my role as Director of Communications, I was ARPA's Grassroots Manager between April 2015 and March 2023.
2. I have personal knowledge of the facts and matters herein, except where stated to be based on information and belief, and where so stated I believe them to be true.
3. ARPA seeks leave to intervene in this appeal, and I am authorized to swear this Affidavit in support of ARPA's application for leave to intervene in this matter.

4. ARPA is a non-profit political advocacy organization committed to defending the right of Christians to pursue professional vocations and participate in public discourse without fear of penalty. ARPA is concerned that the Panel's decision will compel medical professionals to self-censor or face penalties. ARPA is also concerned that the Panel's decision will make it difficult for Reformed Christians to work in the medical profession or have their views represented.

5. ARPA seeks to assist this Honourable Court by providing a distinct and useful perspective on the issues before it. ARPA proposes to address the importance of gender-critical speech, emphasizing that it constitutes valuable philosophical speech that serves the purposes of freedom of thought, belief, opinion, and expression.

6. I believe that robust protection for free expression is crucial to ARPA's mission, and that ARPA has an important and unique perspective to offer the Court.

7. ARPA has developed expertise in constitutional and human rights law and is an experienced intervener and friend of the court. I believe ARPA can provide distinct and helpful legal submissions regarding the value of gender-critical speech and its connection to the underlying purposes of freedom of expression.

ARPA's Mission, Constituency, and History

ARPA's Mission

8. ARPA is a not-for-profit and non-partisan Reformed Christian political advocacy organization. ARPA's two-fold mission is (a) educating, equipping, and assisting members of Canada's Reformed churches and the broader Christian community as they seek to participate in politics and public life; and (b) bringing a biblical perspective to civil authorities in Canada, including the courts.

9. ARPA's work is directed primarily toward members of several Reformed denominations, including the Canadian Reformed Churches, United Reformed Churches, Free Reformed Churches, Heritage Reformed Churches, Presbyterian Church in America, Orthodox Presbyterian Church, Reformed Presbyterian Church, and Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church. These denominations belong to the North American Presbyterian and Reformed Council (NAPARC), an informal partnership of North American churches united by their commitment to the Bible as the Word of God and to the historic Reformed theological confessions.

10. The Reformed congregations to which ARPA directs its mission are committed to the Bible in its entirety as the Word of God, and to the doctrines summarized in the Three Forms of Unity (Heidelberg Catechism, Belgic Confession, and Canons of Dort) and/or the Westminster Standards (Westminster Confession of Faith and Westminster Larger and Shorter Catechisms). Affirming the teaching of these historic confessions is a prerequisite for holding a board or staff position with ARPA.

11. Confessional Reformed churches are distinct from other major Christian traditions, including Evangelical, Orthodox, and Roman Catholic churches. The Reformed Christian faith emphasizes the sovereignty of God, God's covenant relationship with His people, and the importance of applying a wholistic biblical, Christian worldview to all of life, including political life and issues of public justice.

12. ARPA believes that Christians have a duty to apply our faith in all of life, including through Christian social and political engagement, and that this should always be done with both grace and truth, as Jesus Christ taught. ARPA believes that Christians and people of other faiths ought to be free to publicly express and manifest their beliefs.

13. ARPA believes that thoughtful Christian engagement in public life, drawing on the intellectual and moral richness of the Christian tradition, serves the common good.

ARPA's Constituency

14. ARPA directs its mission to Reformed Christians in Canada, consisting primarily of members of approximately 180 Reformed congregations in Canada.

15. ARPA also coordinates a network of 19 local ARPA chapters and 15 ARPA school clubs.

ARPA's History

16. Since its incorporation, ARPA has become a primary vehicle through which many Reformed Christians learn about legal developments and engage in politics and public life.

17. Local voluntary associations of Reformed Christians dedicated to non-partisan political engagement rooted in a Christian worldview first began in Canadian Reformed churches in the 1970s. These operated independently until 2007, when ARPA was registered as a national not-for-profit corporation. The legal and political engagement of local “ARPA” groups and ARPA Canada follows in the footsteps of political engagement by Reformed Christians for centuries, particularly in the Netherlands, Belgium, France, Switzerland, and Germany. ARPA sees itself as following in and continuing this tradition.

ARPA’s Expertise and Experience

18. ARPA has 12 staff members, all Reformed Christians, several of whom have graduate degrees in political science. Our staff also includes two full-time in-house legal counsel. ARPA supported one of our in-house legal counsel’s LLM studies (Emory, 2019), which focused on the intersection of law and religion. In short, ARPA has invested significantly into developing expertise in law and public policy.

19. ARPA has devoted nearly nineteen years to sustained engagement toward all levels of government. This has included public awareness campaigns, presentations, debates, appearances in radio and television interviews, and writing many articles for various national and local newspapers, academic journals, and online publications.

20. ARPA has successfully litigated four cases to defend its political expression. In the Hamilton case (below), both the city and an intervener tried to characterize ARPA’s pro-life expression as discriminatory or disparaging towards women, even though our advertisement called for restrictions on sex-selective abortion of pre-natal females. ARPA’s experience is that its advocacy related to this and other issues is often unfairly attacked as discriminatory, as an ideological censorship tactic. Yet all ARPA’s court challenges have succeeded. I believe these cases illustrate that our freedom to express our political views is under serious threat:

- a. In Association for Reformed Political Action Canada and David Broere v The City of St. Catharines, Div Ct File No. CV-24-00062091-0000 (2024), the City passed a bylaw that forbade distributing any “image of a fetus” to residences. Although ARPA never uses images of aborted children or any graphic images, its pro-life pamphlets were still captured by the bylaw. The City repealed its impugned bylaw shortly before the hearing, rendering the case moot.

- b. In Association for Reformed Political Action Canada v. Hamilton (City of), 2023 ONSC 6443, ARPA’s application for judicial review of the City’s decision to reject its “Defend Girls” advertisement about the reality of sex-selective abortion was granted and the City subsequently permitted the advertisement.
- c. In ARPA Canada v. London Transit Commission and City of London, Div Ct. File No. 19-50 (2019), ARPA challenged the City’s decision to reject a transit advertisement that simply said, “Canada has no abortion laws” and referred to our website with more information about other countries’ laws. The case was settled and the City accepted ARPA’s advertisement and changed the City’s policy.
- d. In ARPA Canada and Patricia Maloney v Ontario (AG), 2017 ONSC 3285, ARPA successfully challenged section 65(5.7) of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, which excluded records related to abortion services from the statutory right of access to information, as a violation of s. 2(b) of the Charter.

21. ARPA is an experienced and knowledgeable intervener. It has appeared as an intervener before this Court, the British Columbia Court of Appeal, the Supreme Court of Canada, and various other courts across the country. ARPA has intervened in legal matters involving freedom of expression, freedom of conscience, gender identity, and human rights, and more. ARPA’s submissions consistently highlighted the importance of protecting freedom of expression as the basis of a free and democratic society.

22. In the following Charter cases, this Court and the British Columbia Court of Appeal found that ARPA met the test for public interest interventions:

- a. John Vabuolas, et al. v. Information and Privacy Commissioner for British Columbia, et al. (SCC No. 41816 (orders pronounced May 12, 2026)).
- b. Vabuolas v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2025 BCCA 83.
- c. Vabuolas v British Columbia (Information and Privacy Commissioner), 2024 BCSC 27.
- d. Beaudoin v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2022 BCCA 427.
- e. Beaudoin v British Columbia, 2021 BCSC 512.
- f. A.B. v. C.D., 2020 BCCA 11.

- g. Lamb v. Canada (Attorney General) (BCSC Vancouver No. S165851 (orders pronounced January 14, 2019, and August 19, 2019).
- h. Trinity Western University v. Law Society of British Columbia, 2016 BCCA 423.
- i. Trinity Western University v. Law Society of British Columbia, 2015 BCSC 2326.

23. ARPA has also been granted leave to intervene as a friend of the court in the following sixteen other court hearings, all of which deal with Charter, human rights, and/or administrative law issues:

- a. R. v. Kloubakov 2025 SCC 25.
- b. The King v. Whatcott, 2023 ONCA 536;
- c. Guelph and Area Right to Life v. City of Guelph, 2022 ONSC 43;
- d. Canadian Alliance for Sex Work Law Reform v Canada (AG), 2023 ONSC 5197;
- e. Ontario v. Trinity Bible Chapel, 2023 ONCA 134;
- f. Gateway Bible Baptist Church et al. v. Manitoba et al. 2023 MBCA 56;
- g. Ontario v. Trinity Bible Chapel, 2022 ONSC 1344;
- h. Gateway Bible Baptist Church et al. v. Manitoba et al., 2021 MBQB 219;
- i. Ethiopian Orthodox Tewahedo Church of Canada v. Aga, 2021 SCC 22;
- j. Highwood Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses v. Wall, 2018 SCC 26;
- k. Trinity Western University v. Law Society of Upper Canada, 2018 SCC 33 & Law Society of British Columbia v. Trinity Western University, 2018 SCC 32;
- l. Trinity Western University v. Law Society of Upper Canada, 2016 ONCA 518;
- m. Nova Scotia Barristers Society v. Trinity Western University, 2016 NSCA 59;
- n. Loyola High School, et al. v. Attorney General of Quebec, 2015 SCC 12;
- o. Carter et al., v. Canada (Attorney General), 2015 SCC 5;
- p. Trinity Western University v. Nova Scotia Barristers Society, 2014 NSSC 331;

24. One case in which ARPA participated directly involved questions of gender identity. In A.B. v. C.D., 2020 BCCA 11, a father was barred from discussing his daughter's gender transition with her. In that case, ARPA argued that singling out the father's thoughts, beliefs, and opinions infringed his s. 2(b) rights and the child's right to parental guidance.

25. ARPA has made submissions to government bodies related to gender identity or freedom of expression, including the following:

- a. On October 30, 2025, ARPA appeared before the House of Commons Standing Committee on Justice and Human Rights for the Committee's study on Bill C-9, Combating Hate Act, regarding amendments to the Criminal Code, including the proposed removal of the good faith religious defence under s. 319(3)(b).
 - b. On April 11, 2019, ARPA presented to the House of Commons Standing Committee on Justice and Human Rights for the Committee's study of online hatred.
 - c. On April 6, 2017, ARPA presented to the Ontario legislature's Standing Committee on Justice Policy regarding Bill 89, Supporting Children, Youth and Families Act, 2017, and its implications for freedom of religion and expression. ARPA's submissions examined how sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression are considered in decisions about foster care, adoption, and child protection.
 - d. In March 2017, ARPA presented to the City of Hamilton's Audit Committee regarding the City's "Proposed Protocol for Gender Identity and Gender Expression" noting both strengths and weaknesses of the Protocol, including freedom of expression concerns.
26. ARPA has published numerous policy reports on its website and commentaries in external publications on questions around gender identity, including in the past few years:
- a. ARPA Canada, Removing Gender Ideology from Education, 2025.
 - b. ARPA Canada, Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity, 2025.
 - c. ARPA Canada, Medical Gender Transition, 2025.
 - d. Levi Minderhoud, "Alberta's right to use notwithstanding clause to limit medical transitioning for minors," Western Standard, November 20, 2025.
 - e. Levi Minderhoud, "When conservatives concede the classroom to gender identity warriors," Western Standard, September 8, 2025.
 - f. John Sikkema, "Hamilton: where billboards can't question transgender children", National Post, August 26, 2025.
 - g. John Sikkema, "Resisting gender ideology indoctrination in Canada's public schools", C2C Journal, February 15, 2025.
 - h. John Sikkema, "Is an ad saying 'women are female' now considered hate speech?" Canadian Affairs, January 5, 2025.

- i. Levi Minderhoud, “Canada’s provinces should follow peer countries in Europe and ban medical transitions for minors,” The Hub, September 26, 2024.
- j. John Sikkema, “Alberta stands accused of politicizing gender-affirming care”, Troy Media, February 26, 2024.
- k. John Sikkema, “Alberta right to take a stand on youth gender treatment”, Troy Media, February 23, 2024
- l. Levi Minderhoud, “Alberta followed the science when it limited medical transitioning for minors,” Troy Media, February 15, 2024.
- m. John Sikkema, “Are 11-year-olds old enough to decide their gender identity?” Troy Media, September 13, 2023
- n. John Sikkema, “Why we need to discuss gender dysphoria treatments for kids in Canada”, Troy Media, September 11, 2023.
- o. John Sikkema, “Are schools overstepping their boundaries on gender identity?” Troy Media, July 4, 2023.
- p. John Sikkema, “Who should have control over a child’s gender identity?” Troy Media, June 15, 2023.

ARPA’s Unique Perspective and Interest

27. ARPA’s unique perspective is rooted in Reformed Christian theology and philosophy. The Reformed tradition affirms that all people, including people who consider themselves transgender, are made in God’s image and are entitled to respect and dignity. Reformed Christian teaching adhered to by ARPA and by NAPARC churches also maintains that one’s biological sex is decisive in identifying whether a person is a man or a woman.

28. In 2020, the Presbyterian Church in America (PCA)—a confessionally orthodox Reformed denomination and one of North America’s largest Presbyterian bodies, with over 1900 churches in both the US and Canada, according to its website—published the Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality to the Forty-Eighth General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America (2019-2020) (“PCA Report”). The PCA Report is included as Exhibit “A” to my affidavit. ARPA’s position is that the PCA Report faithfully summarizes the Reformed Christian perspective on sexuality and gender.

29. ARPA likewise affirms The New Reformation Catechism on Human Sexuality (“Catechism”), which was written by a Minister in the United Reformed Churches of North America, and which – I am informed – is widely used in Reformed churches as a teaching tool. This Catechism is included as Exhibit “B” to my affidavit.

30. The PCA Report articulates the Reformed Christian belief that all persons, regardless of their sexuality or gender identity, are made in God’s image, deserving equal rights and respect. The Report explains that, “all people by virtue of their creation are image bearers [of God] regardless of how they conceive of their sexual identity,” and that “all people, including those in what contemporary society identifies as the LGBT community, are worthy of dignity and respect as image bearers and should never be the target of self-righteous condescension, violence, or hatred” (PCA Report, Exhibit A, p. 27).

31. Reformed Christians also hold that sexual intimacy is a gift from God, intended to be expressed in marriage between a man and a woman (PCA Report, Exhibit A, p. 6):

32. Reformed Christians believe that sexual intimacy is a gift from God to be cherished and is reserved for the marriage relationship between one man and one woman (Prov. 5:18-19). Marriage was instituted by God for the mutual help and blessing of husband and wife, for procreation and the raising together of godly children, and to prevent sexual immorality (Gen. 1:28, 2:18; Mal 2: 14-15; 1 Cor. 7:2,9; WCF 24.2). Marriage is also a picture of the differentiated relationship between Christ and the Church (Eph. 5:22-33; Rev. 19:6-10). All other forms of sexual intimacy, including all forms of lust, and same-sex sexual activity of any kind, are sinful (Lev. 18:22; 20:13; Rom. 1:18-32; 1 Cor. 6:9; 1 Tim. 1:10; June 7; WLC 139).

33. The PCA Report further explains that gender dysphoria requires a compassionate response (Statement 2: Image of God, p. 6). At the same time, the PCA Report and the catechism teach that accepting one’s biological sex – and identity as male or female – as a gift from God is healthy and good (PCA Report, Exhibit A, Statement 2, at p. 6; Catechism, Exhibit B, at QA3-QA8).

34. ARPA and Reformed Christians do not view these biblical positions regarding sex and gender to be merely private, personal, or subjective claims, but as objective, public truths about human nature, which are critical to human flourishing (Catechism, Exhibit

B, QA7). Thus, ARPA regularly encourages its supporters to engage – wisely, winsomely, and graciously – in public debate and civic life, including on contentious issues relating to sex and gender.

35. Freedoms of expression, conscience, and religion are central to ARPA’s mission and to the Reformed Christian community it serves. These freedoms are especially important to ARPA because they allow Christians to participate in professional and political life without renouncing or suppressing their religious beliefs. Ms. Hamm's appeal raises issues of great importance to ARPA and its constituency, including the extent to which professional regulators may regulate thought, belief, opinion, and expression.

36. Some members of ARPA’s constituency, whom I know personally, are health care professionals. I believe the outcome of this application could have a serious impact on their freedom to express their beliefs on philosophical and political issues of great public importance. I am concerned that the Panel’s decision may force medical professionals with traditional Christian views on sex and gender to stay silent out of fear of being penalized.

37. ARPA has several concerns with modern gender identity theory, including its support for the misguided notion that a person can be “born in the wrong body”, and its support for what is euphemistically called “gender-affirming care”, especially for minors.

38. ARPA has criticized governments for proclaiming support for modern gender identity theory while actively suppressing free speech in support of Christian or conservative causes.

39. Given ARPA's significant experience, expertise, and longstanding advocacy in on issues relating to sex and gender, I believe ARPA is well positioned to assist this Honourable Court by providing a distinct Reformed Christian perspective on the issues raised in this appeal.

40. ARPA will not seek to introduce evidence. ARPA does not seek costs.

41. I acknowledge the solemnity of making a sworn statement and acknowledge the consequences of making an untrue statement.

42. I was not physically present before the person before whom this affidavit was sworn but was in that persons’ presence using video conferencing.

43. I swear this affidavit in support of ARPA's application for leave to intervene in this matter and for no other or improper purpose.

Sworn remotely, in Accordance with O. Reg 431/20, Administering Oath or Declaration Remotely, by Colin Postma stated as being located in the City of Gatineau in the Province of Quebec before me in the City of Ottawa in the Province of Ontario on June 6, 2025.

Joel Persaud (LSO 92203H)
A Commissioner for taking oaths
In the province of Ontario

Colin Postma
Executive Director,
Association for Reformed
Political Action (ARPA)
Canada

THIS IS EXHIBIT "A"
REFERRED TO IN THE AFFIDAVIT OF
Colin Postma

SWORN BEFORE ME
IN ACCORDANCE WITH O. REG 431/20,
THIS 25th DAY OF JUNE, 2026.

A Commissioner for Taking Oaths

Type text here

1 FORTY-SEVENTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY
2 OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN AMERICA
3 AD INTERIM COMMITTEE ON HUMAN SEXUALITY
4

5
6 May 2020

7 8 To the 48th General Assembly,
9

10 The following Ad Interim Committee Report has been prepared for the 48th General 11 Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America originally scheduled for June 2020.
12

13 As a consequence of the postponing of that Assembly due to the COVID-19 pandemic, our 14 Report will now not be officially presented to the General Assembly until its next scheduled 15 meeting in 2021.
16

17 Nevertheless, the Committee wants to make this Report available to the church at this 18 originally scheduled time because we were commissioned to engage in this study due to 19 pressing needs in our church and society. Our prayer is that the Scriptural solidarity and 20 relational unity we experienced as a Committee will be reflected in what we have written,
21 and may also prove helpful for the unity, witness, and mission of our church and her people.
22

23
24 TE Dr. Bryan Chapell Northern Illinois Presbytery (Chair)
25 TE Dr. Kevin DeYoung Central Carolina Presbytery
26 TE Dr. Tim Keller Metropolitan New York Presbytery
27 TE Dr. Jim Weidenhaar Pittsburgh Presbytery
28 RE Dr. Derek Halvorson Tennessee Valley Presbytery
29 RE Mr. Kyle Keating Missouri Presbytery
30 RE Mr. Jim Pocha North Texas Presbytery

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

This page intentionally left blank

REPORT OF THE AD INTERIM COMMITTEE ON HUMAN SEXUALITY TO THE FORTY-EIGHTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN AMERICA (2019-2020)

In June 2019, the 47th PCA General Assembly in Dallas adopted a recommendation from its Overtures Committee answering Chicago Metro Presbytery's Overture 42 in the affirmative, as amended by the OC.¹ The GA directed Moderator Donahoe to “appoint the seven voting members who shall be either PCA teaching or ruling elders, and the Committee shall include at least three teaching and three ruling elders.” The GA's assignment to the Committee is shown in Attachment A. Below is a list of members, with brief biographies in Attachment B.

TE Dr. Bryan Chapell	Northern Illinois (Chair)	RE Dr. Derek Halvorson	Tennessee Valley
TE Dr. Kevin DeYoung	Central Carolina	RE Mr. Kyle Keating	Missouri
TE Dr. Tim Keller	Metropolitan New York	RE Mr. Jim Pocta	North Texas
TE Dr. Jim Weidenaar	Pittsburgh

The Committee had eight meetings: Aug. 30, Sept. 9, Oct. 10, Nov. 15, Dec. 13, Feb. 10, Mar. 4, and Apr. 3. Below is a summary of the matters the GA assigned to the Committee, according to the subdivisions of the overture (see Attachment A).

- 1.a; 2 annotated bibliography;
- 1.b.1 nature of temptation, sin, repentance, and the difference between Roman Catholic and Reformed views of concupiscence as regards same-sex attraction;
- 1.b.2 propriety of using terms like “gay Christian” when referring to a believer struggling with same-sex attraction;
- 1.b.3 status of “orientation” as a valid anthropological category;
- 1.b.4 practice of “spiritual friendship” among same-sex attracted Christians;
- 1.c analysis of WLC 138 & 139 regarding same-sex attraction, with careful attention given to the compatibility of the 7th commandment and same-sex attraction and the pursuit of celibacy by those attracted to the same sex;
- 1.d exegesis of the terms “malakoi” and “arsenokoitai” (1 Cor. 6:9);
- 1.e suggested ways to articulate and defend a Biblical understanding of homosexuality, same-sex attraction, and transgenderism in the context of a culture that denies that understanding.

The Report is arranged in six sections (with pertinent overture subdivisions shown in parentheses).

Preamble	3
Twelve Statements (1.b, 1.c, 1.d)	6
Confessional Foundations Regarding the Nature of Temptation, Sin, & Repentance (1.b.1).....	14
Biblical Perspectives for Pastoral Care - Discipleship, Identity, & Terminology (1.b.2-4, 1.c)	24
Apologetic Approaches for Speaking to the World (1.e).....	34
Select Annotated Bibliography (1.a and 2)	45
Conclusion	53
Attachment A - Assignment from the 47th GA	55
Attachment B - AIC Member Bios	58

Herein the Committee has sought to address the issues and questions assigned to it for study by the 47th General Assembly. Although we are not making any formal recommendations, we hope and pray that this Report will be unifying, edifying, and Biblically useful for our denomination.

¹ M47GA, 701 (original version of Overture 42); 104 (Overture 42 as amended by GA Overtures Committee).

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

This page intentionally left blank

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

PREAMBLE

This Committee has been tasked by the 2019 General Assembly to “study the topic of human sexuality with particular attention to the issues of homosexuality, same-sex attraction, and transgenderism and prepare a report” (Overture 42 from Chicago Metro Presbytery, as amended [M47GA, 104]). Our task was not to address the whole of human sexuality, but limited to specific concerns raised in our denomination.

The Assembly’s adopted overture lists a number of issues that it wants the Report to address, including: (1) the nature of sexual sin, temptation, and mortification, (2) the propriety (or not) of a Christian referring to himself or herself as a “gay Christian,” (3) the propriety (or not) of speaking of a homosexual “orientation,” and (4) recent practices of incorporating Christians into Christian community who have been attracted to the same sex—all while giving special attention to parts of the Scripture (e.g., 1 Corinthians 6) and the Standards (e.g., WLC 138 & 139) that are relevant to these topics.

Our list of assigned topics is long, and we have sought to address them most directly in this Preamble and the immediately following Twelve Statements that we pray are of a length to be most helpful for ease of distribution and common use in the church. This Preamble and Twelve Statements are a summary of our discussions and convictions, and provide a theological and pastoral framework for all the other parts of this Report. Our Committee engaged in its most lengthy and precise discussions on these two documents, as we carefully weighed the most critical issues to provide Biblical and Confessional arguments that we hope will bring clarity and unity on these sensitive subjects for our churches, families, and friends.

Our Committee also gathered explanatory essays from our members that discuss issues assigned to us by the Assembly. We have included these essays in subsequent sections of this Report because, without endorsing how every thought is expressed, we all believe they will be helpful in explaining key understandings behind our Twelve Statements. Finally, we compiled a Select Annotated Bibliography that lists materials we believe will be helpful to the various constituencies of our church who wish to become more informed about these issues. In this bibliography, we have provided materials for a variety of audiences (pastors, scholars, parents, children, etc.). Our goal is not to present an exhaustive list of all available materials (that would unbalance the elements and efficacy of this Report), but to aid the church by presenting some of the most useful materials for different constituencies and different purposes. We cannot affirm our agreement with every word or thought in such a wide variety of materials (indeed, sometimes we must make informed readers aware of resources they should be prepared to counter or receive with caution). Our goal is for our annotations to guide our readers with the Biblical discernment needed to hold to what is good and rightly sift what is unbiblical or less certain.

Amidst all these statements and essays we discern two overarching concerns—concerns which may be expressed as two important tasks for the Church in our time and two competing sets of fears.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 The two tasks could be called the “pastoral task” and the “apologetic task.” On the one hand, 2 Overture 42 asks that the Report “help pastors and sessions shepherd congregants who are
3 dealing with same-sex attraction” (M47GA, 104). On the other hand it asks for “suggested
4 ways to articulate and defend a Biblical understanding of homosexuality, same-sex attraction,
5 and transgenderism in the context of a culture that denies that understanding” (M47GA, 105).

6
7 There is no reason why these two tasks need to be pitted against each other, although they 8 often seem to be. One reason they seem at loggerheads is that attached to each undertaking is 9 a set of fears.

10
11 One set of fears is that we will be harsh and unfeeling toward people who have been wounded
12 and deeply hurt—and often by the Church. A hard-sounding stance toward them at this 13 moment may only make it easier to discredit the Church in people’s minds. As a consequence, 14 many are afraid that the Church will speak in ways that only support the powerful cultural 15 narrative that orthodox Christian belief is toxic for hurting and struggling people.

16
17 Another set of fears, however, is that we will compromise at the very place where the world
18 is attacking the Church in our culture. We see many professing Christians and whole 19 denominations surrendering to the sexual revolution. We do not want to be one of them, nor 20 even now in subtle ways to sow the seeds for some future capitulation. As the natural family
21 is a fundamental unit of human society and is the normal means of care and nurture, all sins 22 which threaten, undermine, or marginalize it are both spiritually dangerous and detrimental to 23 human flourishing.

24
25 Part of the problem with regard to addressing these issues is that many of us are far more 26 gripped with one set of fears than the other. But because both of these tasks—the pastoral and 27 the apologetic—are required, we should give each of them strong attention.

28
29 Sinclair Ferguson, in his book The Whole Christ, reminds us that the two main ways that the 30 gospel is compromised are through legalism on the one hand and antinomianism on the other.
31 He then says that it is common to fall into “the mistake of prescribing a dose of antinomianism 32 to heal legalism, and vice-versa, rather than the gospel antidote of our grace-union with 33 Christ.”² He goes on to argue that the Church must present to the world the whole Christ, 34 “clothed in his gospel.”³ Jesus is both the Holy One and the merciful one. He cleanses the 35 temple yet eats with sinners. He gives Martha teaching on truth (John 11:25-26) yet he gives 36 Mary only tears (John 11:35) even though they had both said the same thing to him about their 37 grief (John 11:21, 32). He gives each of them what they most need at the moment. On the 38 cross Jesus fulfills both the unyielding demands of the Law yet also the most wonderful 39 purposes of God’s love.

40
41 And so we must present “the whole Christ” when we both pastor individuals and speak to the 42 world about sexuality and gender today. Jesus is full of grace and truth. In pastoral care we

² Sinclair Ferguson, The Whole Christ: Legalism, Antinomianism, and Gospel Assurance—Why the Marrow Controversy Still Matters (Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2016), 86.

³ Ibid., 46.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 must not apply the truth so harshly as to be callously alienating or so indirectly that the truth
2 is never clearly grasped.

3
4 The very form of the following Twelve Statements seeks to capture this “grace and truth”
5 wholeness as we address the issues. Each statement is dual, an associating of one truth with a 6 concomitant truth or teaching. The aim is not to achieve some kind of abstract intellectual 7 balance or “third way,” but rather to show the path of theologically rich pastoring. The paired 8 truths help the pastor avoid the opposite errors of either speaking the truth without love or 9 trying to love someone without speaking the truth.

10
11 The “grace and truth” path to which we point the church in this Report is not an easy one.
12 Speaking the truth yet doing it in love is nearly always harder than separating these needed
13 aspects of the whole gospel into two alternatives. Speaking with grace and truth, in the process
14 of our work together this year, we on your Ad-Interim Committee have been delighted to find 15 a greater spirit and degree of oneness amongst ourselves than we would have expected. Our 16 prayer is that our entire church may increasingly find that same “unity of the Spirit in the bond 17 of peace” (Eph. 4:3).

TWELVE STATEMENTS

STATEMENT 1: MARRIAGE

We affirm that marriage is to be between one man and one woman (Gen. 2:18-25; Matt. 19:4-6; WCF 24.1). Sexual intimacy is a gift from God to be cherished and is reserved for the marriage relationship between one man and one woman (Prov. 5:18-19). Marriage was instituted by God for the mutual help and blessing of husband and wife, for procreation and the raising together of godly children, and to prevent sexual immorality (Gen. 1:28; 2:18; Mal. 2:14-15; 1 Cor. 7:2, 9; WCF 24.2). Marriage is also a God-ordained picture of the differentiated relationship between Christ and the Church (Eph. 5:22-33; Rev. 19:6-10). All other forms of sexual intimacy, including all forms of lust and same-sex sexual activity of any kind, are sinful (Lev. 18:22; 20:13; Rom. 1:18-32; 1 Cor. 6:9; 1 Tim. 1:10; Jude 7; WLC 139).⁴

Nevertheless, we do not believe that sexual intimacy in marriage automatically eliminates unwanted sexual desires, nor that all sex within marriage is sinless (WCF 6.5). We all stand in need of God's grace for sexual sin and temptation, whether married or not. Moreover, sexual immorality is not an unpardonable sin. There is no sin so small it does not deserve damnation, and no sin so big it cannot be forgiven (WCF 15.4). There is hope and forgiveness for all who repent of their sin and put their trust in Christ (Matt. 11:28-30; John 6:35, 37; Acts 2:37-38; 16:30-31).

STATEMENT 2: IMAGE OF GOD

We affirm that God created human beings in his image as male and female (Gen. 1:26-27). Likewise, we recognize the goodness of the human body (Gen. 1:31; John 1:14) and the call to glorify God with our bodies (1 Cor. 6:12-20). As a God of order and design, God opposes the confusion of man as woman and woman as man (1 Cor. 11:14-15). While situations involving such confusion can be heartbreaking and complex, men and women should be helped to live in accordance with their biological sex.

Nevertheless, we ought to minister compassionately to those who are sincerely confused and disturbed by their internal sense of gender identity (Gal. 3:1; 2 Tim. 2:24-26). We recognize ⁴ Paul coined the term arsenokoitai (1 Cor. 6:9; 1 Tim. 1:10) from the use of two related terms in the Septuagint version of Leviticus 18 and 20. The basic meaning is “man-bedders” or men who have sex with other men. The word malakoi can mean “soft” as in soft clothing (Matt. 11:8; Luke 7:25), or when used pejoratively of men it can mean “effeminate.” In the ancient Roman world, “The ‘soft’ man lack[ed] masculine posture, courage, authority, and self-restraint; he is like a woman.” Fredrik Ivarsson, “Vice Lists and Deviant Masculinity,” in Mapping Gender in Ancient Religious Discourses, eds. Todd Penner and Caroline Vander Stichele (Leiden: Brill, 2007), 180. Sexual passivity or penetrability is not the definition of malakos, but it is one possible connotation. Ivarsson, “Vice Lists,” 180-81. The combination of arsenokoitai and malakoi, uniquely used in the New Testament in 1 Corinthians 6:9, likely refers most directly—as per the ESV footnote—to the active and passive partners in consensual homosexual activity. For more extended discussion, see Chapter 5 in Kevin DeYoung, What Does the Bible Really Say About Homosexuality? (Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2015).

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 that the effects of the Fall extend to the corruption of our whole nature (WSC 18), which may 2 include how we think of our own gender and sexuality. Moreover, some persons, in rare
3 instances, may possess an objective medical condition in which their anatomical development
4 may be ambiguous or does not match their genetic chromosomal sex. Such persons are also 5 made in the image of God and should live out their biological sex, insofar as it can be known.

6 7 STATEMENT 3: ORIGINAL SIN

8
9 We affirm that from the sin of our first parents we have received an inherited guilt and an
10 inherited depravity (Rom. 5:12-19; Eph. 2:1-3). From this original corruption—which is itself
11 sinful and for which we are culpable—proceed all actual transgressions. All the outworkings
12 of our corrupted nature (a corruption which remains, in part, even after regeneration) are truly 13 and properly called sin (WCF 6.1-5).⁵ Every sin, original and actual, deserves death and 14 renders us liable to the wrath of God (Rom. 3:23; James 2:10; WCF 6.6).⁶ We must repent of 15 our sin in general and our particular sins, particularly (WCF 15.5). That is, we ought to grieve 16 for our sin, hate our sin, turn from our sin unto God, and endeavor to walk with God in 17 obedience to his commandments (WCF 15.2).⁷

18
19 Nevertheless, God does not wish for believers to live in perpetual misery for their sins, each 20 of which are pardoned and mortified in Christ (WCF 6.5). By the Spirit of Christ, we are able 21 to make spiritual progress and to do good works, not perfectly, but truly (WCF 16.3).⁸ Even 22 our imperfect works are made acceptable through Christ, and God is pleased to accept and 23 reward them as pleasing in his sight (WCF 16.6).

⁵ A.A. Hodge comments on WCF 6.5 that “innate moral corruption remains in the regenerate as long as they live” and that “all the feelings and actions” prompted by this remaining corruption “are truly of the nature of sin.” A.A. Hodge, The Westminster Confession: A Commentary (Edinburgh: Banner of Truth, 1998), 115.

⁶ In theological language, actual sin is distinguished from the original sin we inherited from Adam. “Actual” should be understood in a comprehensive sense of the word “act.” The term “does not merely denote those external actions which are accomplished by means of the body, but all those conscious thoughts and volitions which spring from original sin.” Louis Berkhof, Systematic Theology (Grand Rapids, MI: Eerdmans, 1996), 251.

⁷ Calvin defines repentance as “the true turning of our life to God, a turning that arises from a pure and earnest fear of him; and it consists in the mortification of our flesh and of the old man, and in the vivification of the Spirit.” John Calvin, Institutes of the Christian Religion, 2 vols., ed. John T. McNeil, trans. Ford Lewis Battles (Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1960), 3.3.5 [cited by Book, Chapter, and Section].

⁸ Francis Turretin writes: “We must distinguish between truly good and perfectly good. We have proved before that the latter cannot be ascribed to the works of the saints on account of the imperfection of sanctification and the remains of sin. But the former is rightly predicated of them because although they are not as yet perfectly renewed, still they are truly and unfeignedly renewed.” Francis Turretin, Institutes of Elenctic Theology, 3 vols., ed. James T. Dennison Jr., trans. George Musgrave Giger (Phillipsburg, NJ: Presbyterian and Reformed, 1997), 17.4.9.

1 STATEMENT 4: DESIRE

2
3 We affirm not only that our inclination toward sin is a result of the Fall, but that our fallen
4 desires are in themselves sinful (Rom 6:11-12; 1 Peter 1:14; 2:11).⁹ The desire for an illicit
5 end—whether in sexual desire for a person of the same sex or in sexual desire disconnected
6 from the context of Biblical marriage—is itself an illicit desire. Therefore, the experience of 7 same-sex attraction is not morally neutral; the attraction is an expression of original or 8 indwelling sin that must be repented of and put to death (Rom. 8:13).

9
10 Nevertheless, we must celebrate that, despite the continuing presence of sinful desires (and 11 even, at times, egregious sinful behavior), repentant, justified, and adopted believers are free 12 from condemnation through the imputed righteousness of Christ (Rom. 8:1; 2 Cor. 5:21) and 13 are able to please God by walking in the Spirit (Rom. 8:3-6).

14
15 STATEMENT 5: CONCUPISCENCE

16
17 We affirm that impure thoughts and desires arising in us prior to and apart from a conscious
18 act of the will are still sin.¹⁰ We reject the Roman Catholic understanding of concupiscence
19 whereby disordered desires that afflict us due to the Fall do not become sin without a 20 consenting act of the will.¹¹ These desires within us are not mere weaknesses or inclinations
21 to sin but are themselves idolatrous and sinful.¹²

⁹ James 1:14-15 should not be misunderstood as suggesting that fallen desire is something other than sin. Calvin explains: “It seems, however, improper, and not according to the usage of Scripture, to restrict the word sin to outward works, as though indeed lust itself were not a sin, and as though corrupt desires, remaining closed up within and suppressed, were not so many sins. But as the use of a word is various, there is nothing unreasonable if it be taken here, as in many other places, for actual sin. And the Papists ignorantly lay hold on this passage, and seek to prove from it that vicious, yea, filthy, wicked, and the most abominable lusts are not sins, provided there is no assent; for James does not shew when sin begins to be born, so as to be sin, and so accounted by God, but when it breaks forth.” John Calvin, Commentaries on the Catholic Epistles, trans. John Owen (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Book House, 1993), 290.

¹⁰ After describing the Roman Catholic doctrine of concupiscence (i.e. that “the guilt and pollution of original sin was totally removed by baptism” and that concupiscence “does not injure those who do not consent to it”), Herman Bavinck argues: “The Reformation spoke out against that position, asserting that also the impure thoughts and desires that arose in us prior to and apart from our will are sin.” Herman Bavinck, Reformed Dogmatics, ed. John Bolt, trans. John Vriend (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2008), 3:143.

¹¹ “Yet certain temporal consequences of sin remain in the baptized, such as suffering, illness, death, and such frailties inherent in life as weaknesses of character, and so on, as well as an inclination to sin that Tradition calls concupiscence, or metaphorically, ‘the tinder for sin’ (fomes peccati); since concupiscence ‘is left for us to wrestle with, it cannot harm those who do not consent but manfully resist it by the grace of Jesus Christ’” (Catechism of the Catholic Church 1264; see also 1426). Concupiscence is later defined as “the movement of the sensitive appetite contrary to the operation of the human reason...Concupiscence stems from the disobedience of the first sin. It unsettles man’s moral faculties and, without being in itself an offense, inclines man to commit sins” (Catechism of the Catholic Church 2515).

¹² Calvin articulates the Reformed position well: “But between Augustine and us we can see that there is this difference of opinion: while he concedes that believers, as long as they dwell in mortal bodies, are so bound by inordinate desires (concupiscentiis) that they are unable not to desire inordinately, yet he dare not call this disease ‘sin.’ Content to designate it with the term ‘weakness,’ he teaches that it becomes sin only when either act or consent follows the conceiving or apprehension of it, that is, when the will yields to the first strong inclination. We, on the other hand, deem it sin when a man is tickled by any desire at all against the law of God. Indeed, we

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

Nevertheless, we recognize that many persons who experience same-sex attraction describe their desires as arising in them unbidden and unwanted. We also recognize that the presence of same-sex attraction is often owing to many factors, which always include our own sin nature and may include being sinned against in the past. As with any sinful pattern or propensity—which may include disordered desires, extramarital lust, pornographic addictions, and all abusive sexual behavior—the actions of others, though never finally determinative, can be significant and influential. This should move us to compassion and understanding. Moreover, it is true for all of us that sin can be both unchosen bondage and idolatrous rebellion at the same time. We all experience sin, at times, as a kind of voluntary servitude (Rom. 7:13-20).¹³

STATEMENT 6: TEMPTATION

We affirm that Scripture speaks of temptation in different ways. There are some temptations God gives us in the form of morally neutral trials, and other temptations God never gives us because they arise from within as morally illicit desires (James 1:2, 13-14).¹⁴ When temptations come from without, the temptation itself is not sin, unless we enter into the temptation. But when the temptation arises from within, it is our own act and is rightly called sin.¹⁵

Nevertheless, there is an important degree of moral difference between temptation to sin and giving in to sin, even when the temptation is itself an expressing of indwelling sin.¹⁶ While label ‘sin’ that very depravity which begets in us desires of this sort.” Calvin, Institutes, 3.3.10. Likewise, Bavinck argues that sin is found not in the excess of passions, but “in the manner [and] direction of those passions.” Later he writes, “This means, on the one hand, that the objects/images that spirit and body deposit in the soul as the seat of the feelings are impure, sinful, and corrupt; and, on the other hand, that the feelings themselves are corrupt, reflect impurity, are blurred and muddled.” Herman Bavinck, Reformed Ethics: Created, Fallen, and Converted Humanity, ed. John Bolt (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic: 2019), 90-91.

¹³ “‘In some base and strange way,’” Calvin writes, quoting Bernard of Clairvaux, “‘the will itself, changed for the worse by sin, makes a necessity for itself. Hence, neither does necessity, although it is of the will, avail to excuse the will, nor does the will, although it is led astray, avail to exclude necessity. For this necessity is as it were voluntary.’” Afterward he says that we are oppressed by no other yoke than that of a kind of voluntary servitude.” Calvin, Institutes, 2.3.5.

¹⁴ The word for “tempts” (peirazei) and “tempted” (peirazetai) in verses 13 and 14 is the same word (in noun form) translated as “trials” (peirasmois) in verse 2.

¹⁵ John Owen explains: “Now, what is it to be tempted? It is to have that proposed to man’s consideration which, if he close, it is evil, it is sin unto him. This is sin’s trade: epithumei—‘it lusts.’ It is raising up in the heart, and proposing unto the mind and affections, that which is evil; trying, as it were, whether the soul will close with its suggestions, or how far it will carry them on, though it does not wholly prevail. Now, when such a temptation comes from without, it is unto the soul an indifferent thing, neither good nor evil, unless it be consented unto; but the very proposal from within, it being the soul’s own act, it is sin.” “Indwelling Sin,” in John Owen, Overcoming Sin and Temptation, eds. Kelly M. Kapic and Justin Taylor (Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2006), 276.

¹⁶ According to Owen, James 1:14-15 describes a five-step process of sin: (1) the mind being drawn away, (2) the affections being entangled, (3) the will consenting to actual sin, (4) the conversation wherein sin is brought forth into view, and (5) the stubborn course that finishes sin and ends in death (297-98). Each step of the process is worse than the next. We are to be “watchful against all enticements unto the conception of sin,” but in particular we must carefully “attend unto all particular actions” agreeable to God’s will (299). Speaking more broadly, the Larger Catechism teaches that while every sin deserves the wrath and curse of God (WLC 152), some sins are our goal is the weakening and lessening of internal temptations to sin, Christians should feel their greatest responsibility not for the fact that such temptations occur but for thoroughly and immediately fleeing and resisting the temptations when they arise. We can avoid “entering into” temptation by refusing to internally ponder and entertain the proposal and desire to actual sin. Without some distinction between (1) the illicit temptations that arise in us due to original sin and (2) the willful giving over to actual sin, Christians will be too discouraged to “make every effort” at growth in godliness and will feel like failures in their necessary efforts to be holy as God is holy (2 Peter 1:5-7; 1 Peter 1:14-16). God is pleased with our sincere obedience, even though it may be accompanied with many weaknesses and imperfections (WCF 16.6).

STATEMENT 7: SANCTIFICATION

We affirm that Christians should flee immoral behavior and not yield to temptation. By the power of the Holy Spirit working through the ordinary means of grace, Christians should seek to wither, weaken, and put to death the underlying idolatries and sinful desires that lead to sinful behavior. The goal is not just consistent fleeing from, and regular resistance to, temptation, but the diminishment and even the end of the occurrences of sinful desires through the reordering of the loves of one’s heart toward Christ. Through the virtue of Christ’s death and resurrection, we can make substantial progress in the practice of true holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord (Rom. 6:14-19; Heb. 12:14; 1 John 4:4; WCF 13.1).

Nevertheless, this process of sanctification—even when the Christian is diligent and fervent in the application of the means of grace—will always be accompanied by many weaknesses and imperfections (WCF 16.5, 6), with the Spirit and the flesh warring against one another until final glorification (WCF 13.2). The believer who struggles with same-sex attraction should expect to see the regenerate nature increasingly overcome the remaining corruption of the flesh, but this progress will often be slow and uneven. Moreover, the process of mortification and vivification involves the whole person, not simply unwanted sexual desires. The aim of sanctification in one’s sexual life cannot be reduced to attraction to persons of the opposite sex (though some persons may experience movement in this direction), but rather involves growing in grace and perfecting holiness in the fear of God (WCF 13.3).

STATEMENT 8: IMPECCABILITY

We affirm the impeccability of Christ. The incarnate Son of God neither sinned (in thought, word, deed, or desire) nor had the possibility of sinning.¹⁷ Christ experienced temptation passively, in the form of trials and the devil’s entreaties, not actively, in the form of disordered desires. Christ had only the suffering part of temptation, where we also have the sinning part.¹⁸ more heinous than others, depending on the persons offending, the parties offended, the nature of the offense, and the circumstances of the offense (WLC 151).

¹⁷ “We ascribe to Christ not only natural, but also moral, integrity or moral perfection, that is sinlessness. This means not merely that Christ could avoid sinning (potuit non peccare), and did actually avoid it, but also that it was impossible for Him to sin (non potuit peccare) because of the essential bond between the human and divine natures” (Berkhof, Systematic Theology, 318).

¹⁸ This phrasing comes from Owen, who goes on to say, “So that though in one effect of temptations, namely trials and disquietness, we are made like to Christ, and so are to rejoice as far as by any means that is produced;

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 Christ had no inward disposition or inclination unto the least evil, being perfect in all graces
2 and all their operations at all times.¹⁹

3
4 Nevertheless, Christ endured, from without, real soul-wrenching temptations which qualified
5 him to be our sympathetic high priest (Heb. 2:18; 4:15). Christ assumed a human nature that 6 was susceptible to suffering and death.²⁰ He was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief
7 (Isa. 53:3).

8 9 STATEMENT 9: IDENTITY

10
11 We affirm that the believer's most important identity is found in Christ (Rom. 8:38-39;
12 Eph. 1:4, 7). Christians ought to understand themselves, define themselves, and describe 13 themselves in light of their union with Christ and their identity as regenerate, justified, holy 14 children of God (Rom. 6:5-11; 1 Cor. 6:15-20; Eph. 2:1-10). To juxtapose identities rooted in 15 sinful desires alongside the term "Christian" is inconsistent with Biblical language and 16 undermines the spiritual reality that we are new creations in Christ (2 Cor. 5:17).

17
18 Nevertheless, being honest about our sin struggles is important. While Christians should not 19 identify with their sin so as to embrace it or seek to base their identity on it, Christians ought 20 to acknowledge their sin in an effort to overcome it. There is a difference between speaking
21 about a phenomenological facet of a person's sin-stained reality and employing the language
22 of sinful desires as a personal identity marker. That is, we name our sins, but are not named 23 by them. Moreover, we recognize that there are some secondary identities, when not rooted 24 in sinful desires or struggles against the flesh, that can be legitimately affirmed along with our 25 primary identity as Christians. For example, the distinctions between male and female, or 26 between various nationalities and people groups, are not eradicated in becoming Christians, 27 but serve to magnify the glory of God in his plan of salvation (Gen. 1:27; 1 Peter 3:7; 28 Rev. 5:9; 7:9-10).

yet by another we are made unlike to him—which is our being defiled and entangled: and are therefore to seek by all means to avoid them. We never come off like Christ. Who of us 'enter into temptation' and is not defiled?" "Of Temptation," in John Owen, Overcoming Sin and Temptation, eds. Kelly M. Kapic and Justin Taylor (Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2006) 183.

¹⁹ This way of stating the matter comes from Owen: "[Christ] was also like unto us in temptations...But herein also some difference may be observed between him and us; for the most of our temptations arise from within us, from our own unbelief and lusts...But from these things he was absolutely free; for as he had no inward dispositions or inclination unto the least evil, being perfect in all graces and all their operations at all times, so when the prince of this world came unto him, he had no part in him,—nothing to close with his suggestions or to entertain his terrors." John Owen, An Exposition of Hebrews (Edinburgh: Banner of Truth, 1991), 3:468.

²⁰ Bavinck makes this point in arguing that although Christ's human nature was not fallen, he did assume a weak human nature that in some respects differed from Adam's before the Fall (Bavinck, Reformed Dogmatics, 3:311). The impeccability of Christ does not mitigate against genuine struggle in the life of Christ. "For although real temptation could not come to Jesus from within but only from without, he nevertheless possessed a human nature, which dreaded suffering and death. Thus, throughout his life, he was tempted in all sorts of ways—by Satan, his enemies, and even by his disciples (Matt. 4:1-11; Mark 1:13; Luke 4:1-13; Matt. 12:29; Luke 11:22; Matt. 16:23; Mark 8:33). And in those temptations he was bound, fighting as he went, to remain faithful; the inability to sin (non posse peccare) was not a matter of coercion but ethical in nature and therefore had to be manifested in an ethical manner." Ibid., 3:315.

1 STATEMENT 10: LANGUAGE

2
3 We affirm that those in our churches would be wise to avoid the term “gay Christian.”
4 Although the term “gay” may refer to more than being attracted to persons of the same sex,
5 the term does not communicate less than that. For many people in our culture, to self-identify 6 as “gay” suggests that one is engaged in homosexual practice. At the very least, the term
7 normally communicates the presence and approval of same-sex sexual attraction as morally
8 neutral or morally praiseworthy. Even if “gay,” for some Christians, simply means “same-sex 9 attraction,” it is still inappropriate to juxtapose this sinful desire, or any other sinful desire, as 10 an identity marker alongside our identity as new creations in Christ.

11
12 Nevertheless, we recognize that some Christians may use the term “gay” in an effort to be 13 more readily understood by non-Christians. The word “gay” is common in our culture, and 14 we do not think it wise for churches to police every use of the term. Our burden is that we do 15 not justify our sin struggles by affixing them to our identity as Christians. Churches should be 16 gentle, patient, and intentional with believers who call themselves “gay Christians,” 17 encouraging them, as part of the process of sanctification, to leave behind identification 18 language rooted in sinful desires, to live chaste lives, to refrain from entering into temptation, 19 and to mortify their sinful desires.

20 21 STATEMENT 11: FRIENDSHIP

22
23 We affirm that our contemporary ecclesiastical culture has an underdeveloped understanding 24 of friendship and often does not honor singleness as it should. The church must work to see
25 that all members, including believers who struggle with same-sex attraction, are valued
26 members of the body of Christ and engaged in meaningful relationships through the blessings
27 of the family of God. Likewise we affirm the value of Christians who share common struggles 28 gathering together for mutual accountability, exhortation, and encouragement.

29
30 Nevertheless, we do not support the formation of exclusive, contractual marriage-like 31 friendships, nor do we support same-sex romantic behavior or the assumption that certain 32 sensibilities and interests are necessarily aspects of a gay identity. We do not consider same-33 sex attraction a gift in itself, nor do we think this sin struggle, or any sin struggle, should be 34 celebrated in the church.

35 STATEMENT 12: REPENTANCE AND HOPE

36
37 We affirm that the entire life of the believer is one of repentance.²¹ Where we have mistreated
38 those who struggle with same-sex attraction, or with any other sinful desires, we call ourselves 39 to repentance. Where we have nurtured or made peace with sinful thoughts, desires, words, or 40 deeds, we call ourselves to repentance. Where we have heaped upon others misplaced shame
41 or have not dealt well with necessary God-given shame, we call ourselves to repentance.

²¹ Martin Luther, “Ninety-five Theses,” in Martin Luther: Selections from His Writings, ed. John Dillenberger (New York: Anchor Books, 1962), 490.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 Nevertheless, as we call ourselves to the evangelical grace of repentance (WCF 15.1), we see 2 many reasons for rejoicing (Phil. 4:1). We give thanks for penitent believers who, though they 3 continue to struggle with same-sex attraction, are living lives of chastity and obedience. These 4 brothers and sisters can serve as courageous examples of faith and faithfulness, as they pursue 5 Christ with a long obedience in gospel dependence. We also give thanks for ministries and 6 churches within our denomination that minister to sexual strugglers (of all kinds) with Biblical 7 truth and grace. Most importantly, we give thanks for the gospel that can save and transform 8 the worst of sinners—older brothers and younger brothers, tax collectors and Pharisees, 9 insiders and outsiders. We rejoice in ten thousand spiritual blessings that are ours when we
10 turn from sin by the power of the Spirit, trust in the promises of God, and rest upon Christ
11 alone for justification, sanctification, and eternal life (WCF 14.2).

CONFESSIOAL FOUNDATIONS REGARDING THE NATURE OF TEMPTATION, SIN, AND REPENTANCE

GA Assignment: 1.b.1 [Prepare a report which shall address...] the nature of temptation, sin, repentance, and the difference between Roman Catholic and Reformed views of concupiscence as regards same-sex attraction;

Some of the issues being discussed in our churches today have to do with understandings of sin and gospel expectations. Accordingly, the first item assigned to this committee was to address “the nature of temptation, sin, repentance, and the difference between Roman Catholic and Reformed views of concupiscence as regards same-sex attraction” (1.b.1). These are doctrinal categories reflected in our Confessional tradition which are both broadly applicable as well as instructive for many of the specific questions before us. Therefore, before considering issues regarding sexuality, we need to briefly review and describe the system of doctrine concerning sin and the Christian life to which we subscribe in the Westminster Confession of Faith (WCF). In view of the issues before us, we want to focus especially on the human experience of sin and the application of redemption. What do we believe the Bible teaches us about our condition as fallen human beings? What does it mean to be saved from this state? How does regeneration affect our experience of fallenness? How we answer these questions will determine how we answer the more specific questions about our experience of sexuality.

I. CONFESSIOAL FOUNDATIONS

I.A. Corruption

First, the Confession describes the current state of humanity apart from redemption in terms of comprehensive corruption. The Fall of our first parents is described, and the result that they “became dead in sin, and wholly defiled in all the faculties and parts of soul and body” (WCF 6.2).²² This emphasizes the integrated and wholistic nature of our humanity. The corruption of sin strikes at the core of our nature, such that its effects are felt throughout. Further, this corrupted nature is said to be “conveyed to all their posterity” (WCF 6.3).²³ In other words, what was true of our first parents is true of us who are born into their corrupted nature.

As the Confession describes this, it introduces the distinction between the corruption itself and the active fruit of that corruption: “From this original corruption, whereby we are utterly indisposed, disabled, and made opposite to all good, and wholly inclined to all evil, do proceed all actual transgressions” (WCF 6.4).²⁴ This is the distinction between “original” and “actual” sin. As a technical theological term, “actual” sin refers not to the reality or non-reality of sin, ²² Gen. 2:17; Eph. 2:1-3; Gen. 6:5; Jer. 17:9; Titus 1:15; Rom. 3:10-19.

²³ Ps. 51:5; John 3:6; Gen. 5:3; Job 15:14.

²⁴ Rom. 7:18; 8:7; Col. 1:21; Matt. 15:19; James 1:14-15; Eph. 2:2-3.

1 but to its being an *act*²⁵ of the soul as opposed to a disposition or inclination only. While it is
2 significant that a distinction is made between original and actual sin,²⁶ the emphasis at this
3 point in the Confession is that original sin, as a disposition or inclination, is truly sin: “This 4 corruption of nature...itself, and all the motions thereof, are truly and properly sin” (WCF
5 6.5).²⁷

6
7 What is behind Article VI of the Confession, and especially section 5 of the article, is the 8 historical dispute over concupiscence. Though concupiscence as a Latin word originally had 9 a broader definition as simply “desire,” what was in dispute in the Reformation was 10 concupiscence as a technical theological term. As such, it refers not to desire in general but to 11 disordered desire, thus, desire as corrupted by the Fall. Within this category of disordered
12 desire there is especially concern for the spontaneity or unbidden nature of disordered desire.²⁸
13 When the sin status of concupiscence was disputed, the concern was this spontaneous, pre-14 deliberate, experience of desire, before the will consciously assented or consented to it.

15
16 Consent, as described in the Medieval discussions of concupiscence, began at any conscious
17 approval of the feeling, even letting it linger so as to enjoy the feeling itself. Concupiscence 18 was a sinward feeling, arousal, or attraction before any conscious consent to that feeling was 19 given. Concupiscence, then, was the experience of the corruption of our nature. It was the 20 inclination to desire in disordered ways²⁹ experienced as spontaneous feelings and not the 21 consent to or active cultivation of those feelings. Thus, concupiscence in this technical 22 theological sense is associated more closely with original, not actual sin. It is “This corruption 23 of nature...itself, and all the motions thereof,” and is “truly and properly sin” (WCF 6.5).

24 25 I.B. Corruption and the Regenerate

26
27 WCF 6.5 begins, “This corruption of nature, during this life, doth remain in those that are 28 regenerated.”³⁰ This statement is the lead point under which several other things are said about 29 the Christian life—a life that is fundamentally renewed and yet continues to experience the

²⁵ It is important to note act can be internal or external. “The term ‘actual sins’ does not merely denote those external actions which are accomplished by means of the body, but all those conscious thoughts and volitions which spring from original sin.” Berkhof, Systematic Theology, 251.

²⁶ The answer to Question 151 of the Westminster Larger Catechism, in listing factors that mark any sin as “more heinous” than others, mentions if it is “not only conceived in the heart, but breaks forth in words and actions.” Whether this describes the transition from original to actual sin or just the development of actual sin from inward intent to outward deed, the clear implication is that there is an increase in the “heinousness” of sin as it progresses toward active fulfillment.

²⁷ Rom. 7:7-8; Gal. 5:17.

²⁸ Concupiscence as used in this historical-theological context is a very specific category of desire. This usage stems from Augustine’s discussion of the experience of desire rising up in him prior to any conscious consent on his part and even contrary to his reason—sexual desire being a common example (see, for example, Augustine, De Civitate Dei, Book XIV). As such, the theological discussions of concupiscence do not have in mind desire as a broader category.

²⁹ This disorder could be understood in many ways—to desire what ought not be desirable, or to desire what should be desirable to too little or too great an extent, or to desire in the wrong context or with the wrong purpose or in the wrong way, etc. The point is that it is a moral disorder; the “order” by which it is defined as disordered is the Law of God.

³⁰ Prov. 20:9; Eccl. 7:20; Rom. 7:14, 17-18, 21-23; 1 John 1:8, 10.

1 effects of the Fall. This section, though it mentions that “through Christ” this corruption is 2 “pardoned and mortified,” emphasizes both that it remains in the Christian and that it is sin.

3
4 What then, are we to make of this corruption being “pardoned and mortified?” That it is 5 pardoned refers to the doctrine of justification. The Reformation’s teaching on justification is 6 clarified as opposed to the Roman view by how God is said to deal with the remaining sinful
7 corruption. Chapter 11 makes the point that when God justifies corrupted humans, he does it
8 “not by infusing righteousness into them, ...but by imputing the obedience and satisfaction of 9 Christ unto them” (WCF 11.1).³¹ The fact that the corruption remains highlights that 10 justification is imputed, not infused.

11
12 But is there any real change in the life of the believer? Is the believer only forgiven, but 13 doomed to continue in this life in the exact condition of sinful corruption and slavery to it?
14 No, there is change—change that is both real and imperfect. The Confession describes real 15 change in its article on Free Will: “When God converts a sinner and translates him into the 16 state of grace, he freeth him from his natural bondage under sin, and, by his grace alone,
17 enables him freely to will and to do that which is spiritually good” (WCF 9.4).³² Our doctrine 18 clearly affirms that the Christian wills and does spiritually good things. But immediately the 19 Confession adds, “yet so as that, by reason of his remaining corruption, he doth not perfectly, 20 nor only will that which is good, but doth also will that which is evil.”³³ We will and do things 21 that are truly good, but not perfectly or exclusively so.

22
23 Chapter 13 on Sanctification further describes the reality of change in the Christian life. There 24 the Confession states, “They, who are once effectually called, and regenerated, having a new 25 heart and a new spirit created in them, are further sanctified, really and personally...the 26 dominion of the whole body of sin is destroyed, and the several lusts thereof are more and 27 more weakened and mortified; and they more and more quickened and strengthened in all 28 saving graces, to the practice of true holiness...” (WCF 13.1).³⁴ This section of the Confession
29 describes the real change and progress we have in Christ by the Spirit, even against the lusts 30 of the body, and toward “true holiness.” In fact, section 2 begins by saying that “this 31 sanctification is throughout, in the whole man,” language which clearly echoes the description 32 of the extent of the corruption. Yet, this change that is “throughout, in the whole man” is “yet
33 imperfect in this life: there abiding still some remnants of corruption in every part, whence
34 ariseth a continual and irreconcilable war, the flesh lusting against the Spirit, and the Spirit
35 against the flesh” (WCF 13.2).³⁵

36
37 The Confession here describes an experience in which we have new life and old corruption 38 existing at the same time, at war with each other. And, the Confession acknowledges that we 39 do not always feel like we are winning battles: “In which war, ...the remaining corruption, for ³¹ Rom. 4:5-8; 3:22-28; 1 Cor. 1:30-31; 2 Cor. 5:19, 21; Titus 3:5, 7; Eph. 1:7; Jer. 23:6.

³² Col. 1:13; John 8:34, 36; Rom. 6:6-7, 14, 17-19, 22; Phil. 2:13.

³³ Gal. 5:17; Rom. 7:14-25.

³⁴ Ezek. 36:22-28; Rom. 6:6, 14; 8:13-14; Gal. 5:24; Eph. 3:16-19; Col. 1:10-11; 1 Thess. 5:23-24;
2 Thess. 2:13-14.

³⁵ Rom. 7:14-25; Gal. 5:17.

1 a time, may much prevail...” (WCF 13.3).³⁶ At any given time in our life some aspect of that
2 corruption may be “much prevailing,” meaning that it may seem that we are not making 3 progress but are stuck or even regressing. But this conflict is ultimately not symmetrical; it is 4 not a tug of war that ends in a tie. Though corruption prevail for a time, the upper hand is 5 given to growth in grace: “In which war, although the remaining corruption, for a time, may 6 much prevail; yet, through the continual supply of strength from the sanctifying Spirit of 7 Christ, the regenerate part doth overcome; and so the saints grow in grace...” (WCF 13.3).³⁷
8 We are to be encouraged that the “corruption prevailing” phase is not the whole story, and by 9 faith the regenerate cling to the promise that the Spirit’s work in them cannot ultimately fail.

11 I.C. Corruption and the Goodness of Our Works

13 There is one more aspect of the Confession’s picture of the Christian life that answers an 14 important question regarding this true spiritual good that we do, which is nonetheless always 15 imperfect and marred by remaining corruption. How is it that our good works can be 16 considered truly good, if they are mixed with corruption and imperfect? Do not good works 17 that are not completely good still fall short by definition? Indeed, Calvin says it this way: “If 18 the true standard of righteousness is to love God with the whole heart, and mind, and strength, 19 it is clear that the heart cannot incline otherwise without declining from righteousness...The 20 law, I say, requires perfect love: we do not yield it. Our duty was to run, and we go on slowly
21 limping.”³⁸

23 The Confession agrees concerning our works, that “as they are good, they proceed from his 24 Spirit; and as they are wrought by us, they are defiled and mixed with so much weakness and 25 imperfection that they cannot endure the severity of God’s judgment” (WCF 16.5).³⁹ Is this a 26 contradiction in the Confession’s description of the Christian life? No. The answer brings us 27 back again to justification and our union with Christ: “Yet notwithstanding, the persons of 28 believers being accepted through Christ, their good works also are accepted in him, not as 29 though they were in this life wholly unblamable and unprovable in God’s sight; but that he,
30 looking upon them in his Son, is pleased to accept and reward that which is sincere, although 31 accompanied with many weakness and imperfections” (WCF 16.6).⁴⁰ As an extension of 32 God’s justifying grace to us in Christ, he is truly pleased with our sincere, though mixed, 33 efforts at good.

³⁶ Rom. 7:23-24; Gal. 6:1; 1 Thess. 5:14.

³⁷ Rom. 6:14; 2 Cor. 3:18; 7:1; Eph. 4:15; 2 Peter 3:18; 1 John 5:4.

³⁸ The context for Calvin’s comment here is his response to the Council of Trent’s statement that concupiscence in believers is not sin. Calvin’s point is that the very fact that our remaining concupiscence causes our good works to be incomplete and “mixed” entails our sinning at least by omission in that we do not fulfill the entire demand of the law. “Antidote to the Council of Trent,” in John Calvin, Tracts, 3 vols., trans. Henry Beveridge (Edinburgh: Calvin Translation Society, 1851), 3:88.

³⁹ Luke 10:27; Ps. 130:3; 143:2; Isa. 64:6; Rom. 7:15, 18; Gal. 5:17.

⁴⁰ Eph. 1:6; 1 Pet. 2:5; Heb. 6:10; 11:4; 13:20-21; 1 Cor. 3:14; 2 Cor. 8:12; Matt. 25:21, 23.

II. APPLICATION TO CURRENT ISSUES

At the heart of much of our current concern is how to understand homosexual attraction in relation to the gospel and the Christian life. The doctrine we have described in the Westminster Confession of Faith shows the way forward on this question, enabling us to make several applications to the issue of same-sex attraction. To begin with, consider the question of concupiscence. The experience of homosexual attraction is an example of concupiscence. As with all other disordered desires, this attraction is contained in what is referred to in the Confession as our “corruption of nature...and all the motions thereof,” and is “truly and properly sin” (WCF 6.5). But that is just the beginning of what should be said. For the Confession says much more about the corruption of our nature than that it is sin. It relates it in a balanced and careful way to the reality of the Christian life. There are several implications of the Confession’s teaching that bear on the issue before us. But first, more must be said about concupiscence.

II.A. Importance of Concupiscence

Let’s start with asking the significance of the affirmation that concupiscence (i.e., our “corruption of nature...and all the motions thereof”) is “truly and properly sin.” Why is this important? The broadest answer to this question can be found by asking the historical question, “Why was it important to the Reformers?” How did the Protestant view differ from the Roman view and why? The Roman view is summarized in the Council of Trent’s decree on original sin:

But this holy synod confesses and is sensible, that in the baptized there remains concupiscence, or an incentive [to sin]; which, since it is left for us to strive against, cannot injure those who consent not, but resist manfully by the grace of Jesus Christ; yea, he who shall have striven lawfully shall be crowned. This concupiscence, which the apostle sometimes calls sin, the holy synod declares that the Catholic Church has never understood to be called sin, as being truly and properly sin in those born again, but because it is of sin, and inclines to sin. And if any one is of a contrary opinion, let him be anathema.⁴¹

As this has often been summed up, the Council says that concupiscence is a result of sin and inclines to sin, but is not itself sin. The anathema is aimed at the Reformers. What was so important to the Reformers that they would be willing to make a sticking point of this doctrine and be anathematized by the Council?

The quotation from Trent above reveals one of the Reformers’ concerns. Trent declared, “This concupiscence, which the apostle sometimes calls sin,...the Catholic Church has never understood to be called sin, as being truly and properly sin in those born again,...” Here the decree refers to Paul’s language in Romans 5-8 from which the Church gets the language of ⁴¹ The Canons and Decrees of the Council of Trent, trans. Theodore Buckley (London: George Routledge and Co., 1851), 23-24. See Fifth article of the First Decree of Session 5. Italics in this translation indicate Scripture quotations.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 indwelling sin and which all parties at the time associated with concupiscence. When the
2 Reformers heard this part of the decree, they heard something like, “The Bible calls it sin, 3 but we as the Church never have.” This touches on issues of authority and tradition that were 4 key to the Reformation. Beyond the issue of authority itself, it was important to the Reformers
5 that sin be defined by Scripture and by God’s Law, not by human experience, expedience, or 6 tradition. If a motion or feeling arises in us that is in a direction contrary to the righteousness
7 described in God’s Law, it is sin, the extent to which we think we consciously deliberated or 8 decided upon it notwithstanding.⁴² The Reformers placed a high importance on the issue of 9 Biblical authority and the defining of sin as any lack of conformity to God’s Law.⁴³

10
11 But on this issue the concern went beyond sin to the gospel, beyond hamartiology to 12 soteriology. Nineteenth-century Free Church of Scotland theologian and historian William 13 Cunningham put it this way: “Scriptural views of the effects of the fall, and of the actual 14 condition of men as fallen, firmly held and fully applied, are fitted to exert a most wholesome
15 influence upon men’s whole conceptions of the way of salvation, and their whole impressions 16 of divine things, and, indeed, are indispensable as a means to this end.” The Reformers were 17 convinced that this was true regarding the question of concupiscence, and that the Roman 18 view corresponded to serious errors in understanding the gospel. “Two of the most striking 19 and dangerous tendencies or general characteristics of the theology of the Church of Rome 20 are, first, exaggerating the efficacy and influence of external ordinances; and, secondly, 21 providing for men meriting the favour of God and the rewards of heaven; and both these 22 tendencies are exhibited in this single doctrine of the innocence or non-sinfulness of 23 concupiscence.”⁴⁴

⁴² So Calvin’s response to Trent is straightforward: “If they would better their case, they must first of all show that there is such a conversion in the nature of things that what is the same becomes unlike itself. It cannot be denied without effrontery, that repugnance to the law of God is truly sin. But the Apostle affirms this of a disease remaining in the regenerate. It follows, therefore, that of its own nature it is sin, although it is not imputed, and the guilt is abolished by the grace of Christ.” Calvin, Tracts, 3:87.

⁴³ Consider William Cunningham’s expression of this: “But one thing is very manifest, that it should require evidence of no ordinary strength and clearness to warrant men in maintaining that that is not truly and properly sin, which the apostle so frequently calls by that name, without giving any intimation that he understood it in an improper or metaphorical sense; and that if there be any subject with respect to which men ought to be more particularly scrupulous in departing, without full warrant, from the literal ordinary meaning of scriptural statements, it is when the deviation would represent that as innocent which God’s word calls sinful, — a tendency which men’s darkened understandings and sinful hearts are but too apt to encourage.” William Cunningham, Historical Theology, 2 vols. (Edinburgh: Banner of Truth, 1960), 1:536.

⁴⁴ Cunningham, Historical Theology, 1:534. That Calvin also noticed this tendency is clear in that he pointed out that in effect the Roman view of concupiscence ended up doing the same thing with original sin in the regenerate as the Pelagians did with original sin in everyone: “If it were only a verbal question, still they ought no more to be listened to than those who affirm that infants cannot properly be said to be born with sin. Both interpret sin in the same way. There is this difference, that the latter speak thus of original sin generally, whereas these venerable Fathers maintain that after baptism a thing is no longer the same thing it was, though it remains the same.” Calvin, Tracts, 3:87. Explaining the effect of the Pelagian heresy on the understanding of the gospel was rhetorically unnecessary; it was enough then to assert that the Roman view of concupiscence was the same error.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

Cunningham's perception of these tendencies in this doctrine is especially connected to the language of the Council of Trent that immediately precedes the direct mention of concupiscence:

If any one denies, that, by the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is conferred in baptism, the guilt of original sin is remitted; or even asserts that all that which has the true and proper nature of sin is not taken away, but says that it is only erased, or not imputed,—let him be anathema. For, in those who are born again, God hates nothing, because, There is no condemnation to those who are truly buried together with Christ by baptism into death; who walk not according to the flesh, but, putting off the old man, and putting on the new one, who is created according to God, are made innocent, immaculate, pure, harmless, and beloved of God, heirs indeed of God, but joint heirs with Christ; so that there is nothing whatever to retard them from entrance into heaven.⁴⁵

The significance of this quotation is Trent's description of what is done to "all that which has the true and proper nature of sin." The Council opposed those who would deny that it is taken away, but only say that it is erased and not imputed. The Reformers saw in this a gospel-destroying shift from the imputation of Christ's righteousness to a confidence in our own. Though reference is made to Romans 8:1, the righteousness that Trent describes as belonging to the Christian is not imputed and alien, but infused and inherent. To the Reformers this struck at the heart of the gospel. The Christian would be encouraged to rest in a righteousness within himself. The paragraph on concupiscence follows immediately, so as to say that though the experience of the pull of concupiscence was still there, the Christian was to believe that all sin was ontologically removed from him (therefore concupiscence must not be sin). The Reformers, however, stressed the importance of recognizing the ongoing presence of sinful concupiscence in the Christian precisely because it highlighted that the righteousness given is only and completely an imputation of that which is Christ's.

Cunningham mentioned as a second tendency, "exaggerating the efficacy and influence of external ordinances." This was not only in the fact that this "removal" of sin is accomplished by the sacrament of baptism, but also in the way the sacramental system of the church would then relate to the Christian life. Since "all that pertains to the true essence of sin" is removed, the Christian is in an innocent, pure state—the corruption from original sin is no longer sin. The only sin that remains possible is actual sin, which would then be dealt with through the sacrament of penance: "Men may still, indeed, incur guilt by actual transgressions of God's law, but the church of Rome has provided for their comfort the sacrament of penance, another external ordinance by which this guilt is taken away."⁴⁶ In summary, the Reformers saw two dangers in the Roman view of concupiscence, a view of the Christian life which was heavily weighted towards reliance on church authority and rites, combined with a view of self and everyday Christian experience that would be more confident than it ought to be in maintaining a pure avoidance of sin. In other words, the daily Christian life would be characterized by a ⁴⁵ Canons and Decrees of the Council of Trent, 23.

⁴⁶ Cunningham, Historical Theology, 540.

1 weakened awareness of one's constant need for the grace and righteousness of Christ (as 2 opposed to the grace administered through the sacramental system of the church).

3 These concerns are certainly not irrelevant to today's issues. The Reformation doctrine in this
4 area highlights that there are implications of the discussion of homosexuality that extend far
5 beyond the issue itself. The issues pertain to our understanding of the gospel, to justification, 6 to the imputation of the righteousness of Christ. There is and should be concern for how the 7 church's teaching affects those among us who experience homosexual attraction. But the 8 church's teaching on these things affects everyone, for it affects the gospel. Keeping in mind
9 how these questions connect to the Christian faith and experience of everyone in the church, 10 we are in a better position to consider some of the implications specific to the issue of 11 homosexuality.

12 13 II.B. Applications to Same-Sex Attraction

14 15 II.B.1. *The Common Dynamic of Concupiscence

16
17 First, the dynamic of spontaneous sinful desire or attraction is not unique to those who 18 experience homosexual desire. All people experience it. It is an essential point in the 19 Confession that all of us who are descended from Adam and Eve experience their corrupted 20 nature and the complex of disordered affections, desires, and attractions that come with that 21 corruption. The danger of this question arising in the context of the discussion of 22 homosexuality is that some might be tempted to think of that particular example of disordered 23 desire as qualitatively different from their own. Or worse, some may be willing to assert the 24 sinfulness of one category of spontaneous desire but minimize or remain largely ignorant of 25 the sinful concupiscence that is common to all.

26
27 The truth is that if we think humbly and carefully about our own spontaneous thoughts, 28 feelings, and desires, we would recognize that we are all much more alike than different. Who 29 has been a Christian for some length of time who is not aware of at least one particular area
30 of struggle with sin in which whatever success is had in curbing behavior is nonetheless
31 accompanied by a troubling inward draw towards the sin, like a stubborn memory of sinful
32 pleasure that interrupts incessantly and uninvited? Who does not feel the passion of sinful 33 anger rising up without conscious deliberation or decision, even in contradiction to a prior 34 deliberate decision to "deal with" our anger problem? Even our lack of feeling is often 35 concupiscent: that which is most good and would glorify God does not delight us as it should;
36 that which is evil does not repel us as it should. Luther put it this way, "For it is like a sick 37 man whose mortal illness is not only the loss of health of one of his members, but it is, in 38 addition to the lack of health in all his members, the weakness of all of his senses and powers, 39 culminating even in his disdain for those things which are healthful and in his desire for those 40 things which make him sick."⁴⁷ Good Reformed teaching on sin places us all on equal footing
41 in our need of Christ's imputed righteousness.

⁴⁷ Martin Luther, Lectures on Romans: Glosses and Scholia, ed. Hilton C. Oswald, trans. Walter G. Tillmanns and Jacob A. O. Preus, vol. 25 of Luther's Works (Saint Louis: Concordia, 1972), 300.

II.B.2. Continued Corruption

Second, according to the system of the Westminster Confession of Faith, we should not be surprised, but rather expect that concupiscence in general, and specific instances like homosexual attraction, would continue in the life of a believer. The Confession is clear; corruption remains “in every part” (13.2). We would never say to a new believer who has a history of destructive anger, “Now that you are a Christian, you will never again feel a rush of anger rise up within you at the wrong time, for a selfish reason, out of proportion to the situation, or in any other way that contradicts God’s law.” Neither should we communicate to a believer with a history of homosexual attraction the expectation that this will simply disappear.⁴⁸

Why is this important? First, it has not been uncommon for those with homosexual attractions to be made, intentionally or unintentionally, to feel as though they cannot be real Christians unless they experience in this life a reversal or eradication of their attractions. If this experience is presented in the form of a promise, as in some expressions of what has been called “reparative therapy,” it is not a promise based on a full understanding of the gospel. If the reversal or eradication is presented in the form of a demand, in the exhortations or discipline of the church, then that demand is an anti-gospel that only crushes and condemns—especially if the admonitions are applied selectively to this form of concupiscence but not to other common varieties, both sexual and other. This acknowledgement of the remnants of corruption in believers does not negate the call to fight against that corruption; our endeavor to oppose and put to death what is earthly in us (Col.3:5) demands a commitment to fight all of our sin. However, to teach that our sinful corruption must be entirely removed from any part of us in order to be considered truly repentant is a spiritually treacherous perversion of the doctrine of repentance.

II.B.3. Real Change

Third, according to the doctrinal system of the Westminster Confession of Faith, we should not rule out, but rather expect that concupiscence in general, and specific instances like homosexual attraction, would be areas in which the believer would see some progress toward truly righteous feelings and actions. Our previous point had to do with the danger of creating the expectation that our experience of corruption will entirely disappear in this life if we are regenerate. This point addresses what might be considered an error on the other end of the spectrum, the error of asserting that change is not possible or not to be sought. But just as the Confession is clear that corruption remains in every part, it is also clear that the sanctifying work of the Spirit is felt in the “whole man.” Someone with homosexual attraction ought not close himself or herself off to the pursuit of, and hope of, real change in those attractions, even if that change is incomplete and mixed.

⁴⁸ It is important to note that we do not ground this point on the reasoning that homosexual attraction is an indelible part of the person, as the world around us would. Rather, we ground it in the Scripture’s picture of the Christian’s life of faith as a battle between the flesh and the Spirit.

1 II.B.4. Celebrating Sincere Efforts

2
3 Fourth, according to the system of the Westminster Confession of Faith, the remaining
4 experience of homosexual attractions notwithstanding, God is truly pleased with one's sincere 5 efforts to follow Christ in holiness because he looks on even those imperfect deeds as being 6 "in Christ," and covered by the imputation of Christ's perfect righteousness (WCF 16.6). This 7 point assumes the Confession's assertion that gospel change in an individual's life is always 8 incomplete and mixed with corruption, but then puts that assertion in the form of a positive
9 encouragement. In Christ, every bit of progress, every moment of victory over temptation, 10 even victory over the temptation that comes from the sinful corruption remaining inside of us, 11 is to be celebrated as a gift of the new life of Christ with confidence that it pleases God as 12 such.

13
14 II.B.5. Moral Difference

15
16 Finally, we can discern a very practical value to the distinction between the sin that is 17 constituted by our "corruption of nature...and all the motions thereof" and the "actual 18 transgressions" that proceed from it. Even where original sin is manifested in the form of 19 sinfully disordered desires or feelings, including homosexual attraction, there is significant 20 moral difference between that initial "motion" of corruption and the decision to cultivate or 21 act on it. To feel a sinfully disordered sexual attraction (of any kind) is properly to be called 22 sin—and all sin, "both original and actual" earns God's wrath (WCF 6.6)—but it is 23 significantly less heinous (using the language of the WLC 151) than any level of acting upon 24 it in thought or deed. The point here is not to encourage those with homosexual attraction to 25 become comfortable with or accepting of it. Rather, it is to counter the undue heaping of shame 26 upon them as if the presence of homosexual attraction itself makes them the most heinous of 27 sinners. On the contrary, their experience is representative of the present life of all Christians.
28 John Owen has said, "...yet sin doth so remain, so act and work in the best of believers, whilst 29 they live in this world, that the constant daily mortification of it is all their days incumbent
30 upon them."⁴⁹ Our brothers and sisters who resist and repent of enduring feelings of same-sex 31 attraction are powerful examples to us all of what this "daily mortification" looks like in "the 32 best of believers." We should be encouraged and challenged by their example and eager to 33 join in fellowship with them for the mutual strengthening of our faith, hope, and love.

⁴⁹ The full sentence places this daily mortification in the context of other senses of mortification: "This, then, is the first general principle of our ensuing discourse: Notwithstanding the meritorious mortification, if I may so speak, of all and every sin in the cross of Christ; notwithstanding the real foundation of universal mortification laid in our first conversion, by conviction of sin, humiliation for sin, and the implantation of a new principle opposite to it and destructive of it;—yet sin doth so remain, so act and work in the best of believers, whilst they live in this world, that the constant daily mortification of it is all their days incumbent upon them." Of the Mortification of Sin in Believers; the Necessity, Nature, and Means of it, in Works of John Owen, 16 vols. (Edinburgh: Banner or Truth, 1967), 6:14.

BIBLICAL PERSPECTIVES FOR PASTORAL CARE—DISCIPLESHIP, IDENTITY, AND TERMINOLOGY

- GA Assignments
- 1.b.2 propriety of using terms like “gay Christian” when referring to a believer struggling with same-sex attraction;
 - 1.b.3 status of “orientation” as a valid anthropological category;
 - 1.b.4 practice of “spiritual friendship” among same-sex attracted Christians;
 - 1.c analysis of WLC 138 & 139 regarding same-sex attraction, with careful attention given to the compatibility of the 7th commandment and same-sex attraction and the pursuit of celibacy by those attracted to the same sex

There is a very important sense in which pastoral care for Christians experiencing attraction to the same sex is, at an essential level, the same as for any other believer who is struggling with sin in our fallen world. All believers regardless of their struggles are made in the image of God and created by him to worship him (Gen. 1:27, 1 Cor. 6:20). All believers have repented and believed upon the Lord Jesus for salvation (Mark 1:15, Rom. 10:9). All believers must mortify their sins, pursue holiness, and strive to live in light of their union with Christ (Rom. 8:13). Nevertheless, it is undeniable that our particular cultural moment—with our culture’s embrace of the sexual revolution and discarding of the Biblical sexual ethic, as well as the failure of some churches to speak with theological clarity and compassion—the pastoral care of same-sex attracted people requires special consideration. In this section of our Report, we seek to address some of the primary issues surrounding the pastoral care of those who experience same-sex attraction in the church, particularly focusing on areas that the General Assembly has asked us to address. Here we will only address them briefly in summary, trusting that our shepherds will further study the Scriptures, our Confessional standards, and some of the recommended writings in the Report’s bibliography for further guidance.

DISCIPLESHIP FOR BELIEVERS EXPERIENCING SAME-SEX ATTRACTION

It is crucially important that our churches communicate to same-sex attracted believers experiencing same-sex attraction⁵⁰ that faithfulness to God’s call to discipleship upon their lives is possible. An unclear understanding of the Reformed position that sinful temptations themselves, as well as sins of the will, are to be repented of might reasonably lead some to believe that faithfulness is impossible and pursuing holiness is an exercise in futility. We should be clear that while every Christian’s obedience remains imperfect and tainted by sin in this life, there is still a very real and important sense in which through Christ all Christians have been equipped for real and progressive obedience to God that brings him honor and is worthy of rejoicing in (WCF 16.6). This remains true even if their attraction to the same sex does not go away.

⁵⁰ As we will note in our later discussion of terminology, the committee recognizes the difficulty of identifying phrasing that is theologically clear and accurate, pastorally helpful, and semantically practical. Here we have opted for a more descriptive, if also more verbose, approach—recognizing that it has its own drawbacks.

1 Sanctification—The Already-Not-Yet Tension

2
3 The call to discipleship for all believers means that none of us can be content to remain
4 unchanged. Indeed, in and through Christ we are in the process of being changed, conformed
5 to the image of Christ. But what does that change look like? What kind of change is normative
6 for believers who experience same-sex attraction? These questions have generated much 7 debate. There are two common errors we might encounter in our attempts to answer such 8 questions, one which reflects an over-realized eschatology and one which reflects an under-9 realized eschatology.

10
11 The error of some Christian approaches to same-sex sexual desire has been to tie faithfulness
12 to the elimination of homosexual temptation (or even the development of heterosexual desire) 13 as though if Christians really did enough therapy, had enough faith, or repented sufficiently, 14 God would deliver them in some final and complete way, changing their orientation. This 15 perspective reflects a sort of over-realized eschatology—a view that what we will be finally 16 and fully in the new creation will be realized in that way in the present life. Against such a 17 view, our Confession reminds us that even in the regenerate, the corruption of sin remains in 18 this life (WCF 6.5). The task for believers is to pursue faithfulness and obedience in this life, 19 holding in view our new creation selves into which we are progressively, though often with 20 many fits and starts, being conformed.

21
22 The error of other Christian approaches to same-sex sexual desire is to treat it as a sort of fixed 23 reality that has no malleability or capacity for change whatsoever. In its most extreme forms, 24 this reflects our broader culture’s notions of one’s sexual orientation being a completely fixed
25 reality—contending that there is no sense in which sexual desires can meaningfully change
26 over time. The problem with this under-realized eschatology is that in its attempts to push 27 back against views of change that overstate the Christian’s sense of having “arrived,” it 28 suggests that there is no journey to take at all and no progress to be expected. However, the 29 Biblical perspective is that the Holy Spirit uses repentance with the ordinary means of grace
30 to advance Christian understanding, godly desires, and Biblical obedience. If a believer 31 struggles with habitual sexual sin, we should expect to see real meaningful change in their 32 behaviors as they repent and mortify their sin, and pursue holiness in aggressive, practical 33 ways. If believers are routinely tempted along similar lines over the course of life, they should 34 expect that the less they give in to that temptation and establish deep habits of holiness, over 35 time the pull of their hearts toward that sin should lessen, or even be drowned out by the 36 expulsive power of a greater affection for Christ.⁵¹

37
38 Therefore, it is critically important that pastors and leaders in our churches communicate 39 clearly about the already-not-yet tension of our experience of sanctification in this life. We 40 ought not over-promise or tie God’s character to promises of complete deliverance in this life
41 that he does not make. However, we also ought not treat same-sex sexual desire as a 42 completely static reality that will involve no significant effort on the part of the believer to 43 war against, regardless of whether such warring produces heterosexual desire. Simply put, the telos of sanctification is Christlikeness, not heterosexuality. As the apostle says, “Beloved, we are God's children now, and what we will be has not yet appeared; but we know that when he appears we shall be like him, because we shall see him as he is. And everyone who thus hopes in him purifies himself as he is pure” (1 John 3:2-3).

⁵¹ See Thomas Chalmers, “The Expulsive Power of a New Affection,” in Sermons and Discourses, 2 vols. (New York: Carter, 1846), 2:271.

The Christian’s Identity

Biblical Identity

Any Christian understanding of our selves—who we believe we are—must first and foremost reflect the basic building blocks of reality as described in Scripture. Particularly, if we are going to think about identity in a distinctively Christian way, the redemptive-historical narrative (creation, fall, redemption, consummation) of the Bible offers us a helpful path.⁵² Scripture begins with the affirmation that humans are created in the image of God, male and female (Gen. 1:27-28; WCF 4.2). This affirmation is the foundational reality of all human identity. It tells us who we are inherently and ontologically—in our very essence. We are made by God and therefore all of our self-understanding is dependent upon the God who made us and sustains our lives. We are made male and female and therefore these categories are not merely cultural constructions or fluid components of our self-understanding—they are identities that are imprinted upon us in our creation by God.⁵³

However, a Biblical understanding of identity must also take into account the reality that we are fallen and corrupted, possessing original and indwelling sin, as well as the miseries of the Fall (WCF 6, 9.4, 13.2; WSC 17-19). It tells us who we are phenomenologically—as we experience our sinful selves and our sinful world. As fallen, sinful human beings we can and should be honest about the ways in which the sin and misery of the Fall are a part of us—even as such a confession is rightly a source of guilt as well as godly grief toward our own sin, the sins of others against us, and the miseries of living in a sin-cursed world.

The third and most critical foundational reality pertains to those who repent and believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. We who are made in his image, yet defiled by sin, are redeemed and restored into the image of Christ (2 Cor. 3:18) through our union with him. This foundational reality identifies who we are teleologically—our end destination, that is, who we are and are becoming in Christ. Thus, the most central claim about any Christian’s identity is that his or her identity is found in Christ. While a thorough explanation of what it means to find our identity “in Christ” is beyond the scope of this Report, we note a few critical observations. First, we are justified and made righteous “in Christ” by virtue of his righteousness and not

⁵² Oliver O’Donovan, Church in Crisis: The Gay Controversy and the Anglican Communion (Eugene: Cascade, 2008), 87. “The narrative of creation and redemption has accompanied and disciplined Christian attempts to think about the moral dilemmas thrown up by every age...In each dilemma, they have asked, what gifts of the Creator are to be rejoiced in here? What evils are to be repented of and lamented? What transformations are yet to be hoped for?”

⁵³ See Ryan S. Peterson, “Created and Constructed Identities in Theological Anthropology,” in The Christian Doctrine of Humanity (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 2018), 124-143. Peterson notes that we have both created identities which are indelible, central, and come from God, and constructed identities, which are our more malleable attempts to interpret our particular experiences and relationships in the world.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

our own (WCF 11). Second, we are sanctified and progressively conformed to the image of Christ as new creations, with the abiding presence and power of Christ as the first fruits (1 Cor. 15:20, 2 Cor. 5:17; WCF 13).⁵⁴ Finally, the ultimate perseverance and glorification of every Christian is secured by their union with Christ.

Sexual Identity

How then are Christians to think about sexual identity (how a person thinks about his or her sexuality) in relation to these three Biblical-theological realities? To what extent should Christians allow their experience of sexuality to shape who they are? And more specifically, how should Christians attracted to the same sex think about how their experience of their sexual attractions shapes who they are?

First, with respect to creation, all people by virtue of their creation are image bearers regardless of how they conceive of their sexual identity. Thus, all people, including those in what contemporary society identifies as the LGBT community, are worthy of dignity and respect as image bearers and should never be the target of self-righteous condescension, violence, or hatred. Within the church there is no place for a sort of second-class citizenship of believers who have particular struggles, trials, or temptations.

Additionally, the doctrine of creation means that any sexual or gender identity that relativizes the reality of the male/female binary as the ideal of creation necessarily undermines the Biblical understanding of sex and gender. While there are cases of ambiguity or uncertainty in identifying biological sex as seen in the experience of intersex persons, these circumstances are a product of the fallenness of creation and do not negate God's original binary design for sex and gender. While it is beyond the scope of this Report to address the particularly complex pastoral issues surrounding intersex persons, we believe the best counsel is rooted in encouraging such persons to live out their biological sex insofar as it can be known.

As we consider human sin and corruption, it is clear that sexual attractions that have their telos or end in something that God has forbidden are themselves sinful desires—a part of indwelling sin that exists in all people and remains even in those who are believers. Any time Christians experience sexual attraction whose fulfillment would be sin, they should recognize such attraction as something to be rejected and mortified. This is true for all believers, regardless of whether those attractions are to the same sex or the opposite sex.

However, we must also acknowledge the ways in which our sexual identities are shaped by the sins of others against us as well as the ways in which the Fall has shaped our biological and social development. Some experiences of sexual desire may come unbidden as a result of ⁵⁴ Sinclair Ferguson describes this element of union with Christ well in Donald L. Alexander, ed., Christian Spirituality: Five Views of Sanctification (Downers Grove, IL: IVP Academic, 1989), 88: “It is rooted, not in humanity and their achievement of holiness or sanctification, but in what God has done in Christ, and for us in union with him. Rather than view Christians first and foremost in the microcosmic context of their own progress, the Reformed doctrine first of all sets them in the macrocosm of God's activity in redemptive history. It is seeing oneself in this context that enables the individual Christian to grow in true holiness.”

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 sins committed against a person, and while sinful, should be treated with great pastoral care
2 for the person who has been victimized and sinned against. The origins and development of 3 sexual desire remain complex and, in many ways, mysterious. It is possible to conceive of the 4 experience of same-sex attraction as simultaneously a part of the remaining corruption of 5 original sin as well as the misery of living in a fallen world, one of the ways our bodies
6 themselves groan for redemption (Rom. 8:22-23; WCF 6.6; WLC 17-19).⁵⁵ For many of these
7 Christians, the burden of shame is already great and what is especially needed from pastors
8 and mature believers is our preaching and living out of the grace of the gospel that frees us all 9 from guilt and shame.

10
11 With respect to our redemption and union with Christ, it is clear that those who are united to 12 Christ must submit their sexual identity to the greater allegiance of being “in Christ.” Such 13 submission has several implications. First, it means that the most important part of our 14 personhood is not found in our sexual desires but rather in being justified, sanctified, and 15 glorified in Christ. Second, it means that our union with Christ should shape our attitude and 16 approach to our sexual desires. Desires that are inconsistent with God’s design are to be 17 resisted and mortified, not celebrated or accommodated. Third, it means that as new creations
18 we are truly being conformed into his image and can rightly expect some measure of growth
19 in this life, even as we await the fullness of our new-creation personhood in the new heavens
20 and new earth. We are best served in our sanctification by looking forward to our new creation 21 selves, which will be fully purified from sinful desire, rather than by looking backwards to 22 our Adamic, fallen selves.

23
24 However, our identity as those united to Christ does not eliminate our experiences of living 25 as sinful people in a sinful world. It remains important for believers to live in the tension of 26 the already and not-yet. Just because our identity is in Christ doesn’t mean that we won’t 27 continue to experience trials and temptations in this life. Christians are well-served when they 28 can be honest about both their present fallen realities and their hope for sanctification. It 29 should not surprise us that regenerate Christians who experience same-sex attraction might 30 continue experiencing those attractions in this life (WCF 16.5-6). Rather, our churches ought 31 to be places where believers can find refuge and strength for the long obedience of discipleship 32 to Christ.

33
34 This discussion of the Scriptural, theological, and pastoral basis for thinking about sexual 35 identity provides the basis for considering the question of terminology to which we next turn.

⁵⁵ In his Systematic Theology, Reformed theologian Louis Berkhof offers a helpful tripartite definition of sin: “Sin may be defined as lack of conformity to the moral law of God, either in act, disposition, or state.” Berkhof: Systematic Theology, 233. The Reformed perspective recognizes that all three—act, disposition, and state—are sin, yet each will require a distinct response on the part of the person. For example, practically and pastorally speaking, repentance or mortification will look different for high-handed rebellion compared to unbidden attractions due in part to sins committed against a person. Our Confession recognizes that we are sinners, those sinned-against, and those living in a fallen world.

1 Terminology

2
3 In light of the theological foundations for human identity as it relates to sexuality, what can
4 we say about the various issues around terminology that have taken up so much time and space
5 in current debates which the General Assembly has asked us to address?
6

7 On Language

8
9 We begin by noting four principles regarding language. First, the language we choose to 10 describe reality matters. Our language and terminology should seek to faithfully and helpfully 11 articulate the truths of our doctrine which are rooted in Scripture. We should choose our 12 language carefully with the goal that it expresses the truth and communicates clearly and 13 winsomely in our particular context. Second, language itself is a secondary issue relative to 14 the doctrine it expresses. Sometimes there are disagreements about language even when the 15 underlying doctrinal commitments seem to be the same. Thus, while doctrinal truth is rightly 16 understood as obligating our affirmation, issues around terminology are more properly
17 understood as issues of wisdom, necessitating careful Scriptural and pastoral guidance. Third,
18 we must recognize that the meanings of terms change over time and that definitions may not 19 be shared across different groups of people.⁵⁶ This is especially true in the area of sexuality, 20 where terminology seems to be developing with increasing rapidity and where there may be 21 few shared definitions across communities. Finally, issues surrounding sexual identity, and 22 identity more generally, cannot be reduced to language alone. There is a way to make being 23 gay central to personhood, while still using circumspect or “acceptable” language. Similarly, 24 there is a way to make being gay far less central to one’s ethos and identity, even while using 25 potentially less helpful language. For these reasons, how persons express themselves is not 26 finally determinative of their identity.
27

28 Gay and Gay Christian

29
30 Take for instance the word gay, which has undergone a massive lexical transformation in the 31 past seventy-five years. Today it most commonly refers to a sense of self in relation to ongoing 32 sexual attraction to the same sex. However, different communities define that sense of self 33 with different nuances. Some Christians might describe themselves as gay merely as a way of 34 articulating that they experience prominent and persistent attractions to the same sex, using 35 terminology our culture is familiar with. Others find the term gay to be an important part of 36 being honest about the reality of their sexual attractions, especially given that other terms like 37 same-sex attraction are perceived by some to be associated with “ex-gay” or orientation-
38 change approaches.⁵⁷ Other Christians might describe themselves as gay in order to identify

⁵⁶ This is a basic principle of lexical semantics. See for example, Moises Silva, Biblical Words and their Meaning: An Introduction to Lexical Semantics (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1983), 139: “...Linguists assign a determinative function to context; that is, context does not merely help us understand meaning—it virtually makes meaning.”

⁵⁷ See for instance Greg Coles, Single, Gay, Christian: A Personal Journey of Faith and Sexual Identity (Downers Grove, IL: IVP Books), 61, 63, where he says, “By talking in terms of attraction instead of sexual orientation, ex-gay advocates were better equipped to treat homosexuality as a passing phase...Because of this linguistic history, I couldn’t help cringing when people referred to my sexual orientation as ‘same-sex attraction.’”

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 with the LGBT community as a group of people with a shared story, culture, and experience.
2 Generally, when the term gay is used in our culture, it denotes all of the above, along with the 3 assumption that this experience is a natural and good part of diverse human experience that is 4 to be celebrated and can be acted upon as a person sees fit. Thus, the word gay can denote a
5 number of things which may vary from a factual observation about one's experiences, to a 6 deeply unbiblical understanding about one's identity and desires. Despite the dynamic and 7 diverse uses of the term, the word gay is not a neutral word in our cultural discourse, and 8 Christians should be mindful of these dynamics when considering use of the term.

9
10 Given the potential issues with the term gay, we can see how the term gay Christian might be 11 open to an even greater degree of misunderstanding. Some use the term in a simple adjectival 12 manner, suggesting that the adjective gay is merely meant to describe which particular 13 Christians one is referring to (namely those experience attractions to the same sex) with no 14 intentions to make a definitive statement about identity. Others use it to articulate how their 15 being "in Christ" has shaped their approach to their gayness or same-sex attraction (see for 16 instance those who use the term celibate gay Christian). Because of these dynamics, it is 17 apparent that the term gay Christian is not adequately clear or theologically precise in 18 expressing the type of Reformed Biblical self-understanding we described earlier. The term 19 can be made more unhelpful by the fact that there are many who use it to describe a view of 20 their sexual identity that is "affirming"—that believes that same-sex sexual desires and 21 relationships are blessed by God. There is an understandable desire among some celibate 22 Christians who identify as gay to utilize the common parlance of our culture as a missional or 23 apologetic tool, hoping to redefine for our culture a way of being gay that in fact submits those 24 desires to the lordship of Christ. However, there is a substantial corresponding risk of 25 syncretism in such an approach. This potential danger toward syncretism can manifest as an 26 over-identification with the LGBT community (over and against a primary identification with 27 the church) or even the formation of an LGBT subculture within the church. In view of the 28 twin dangers of misunderstanding and syncretism, we believe it is generally unwise to use the 29 language of gay Christian.

30
31 Given this conclusion, how should we respond to fellow believers in our churches who may 32 use such language? First, we ought not start from the assumption that they are being unfaithful
33 or living in active rebellion to God. Rather, in the context of established relationships, pastors 34 and leaders in the church ought to ask questions and seek to understand each individual's 35 story. Why do they use that language? Have they thought through the relative benefits and 36 dangers? Noting the range of possible meanings of terms like gay and gay Christian, we would 37 do well to seek understanding before imparting advice. In practical and plain terms, the issue
38 of terminology is more likely a matter for shepherding in wisdom, and not in and of itself 39 grounds for discipline.

40 Orientation

41
42 How then should we think of the language of sexual orientation? Insofar as the term 43 orientation is used descriptively to articulate a particular set of experiences, namely the 44 persistent and predominant sexual attractions of an individual, it can remain useful as a way

1 of classifying those experiences in contrast to the experiences of the majority of other people.
2 However, insofar as the term orientation carries with it a set of assumptions about the nature
3 of that experience that is unbiblical (e.g., overemphasized rigidity, its normativity, etc.), then
4 the terminology may require qualification or even rejection in some circumstances.⁵⁸

5 6 Singleness, Friendship, and Community

7
8 It is a sad reality that some Christians in our churches who experience same-sex attraction 9 have found limited support and encouragement in their desire to follow Christ. While the 10 reasons for this reality vary, one of the most critical components to faithful discipleship is a 11 deep-rooted connection in a local body of believers who can provide challenge, 12 encouragement, and a strong sense of belonging. We ought to grieve any time a person who 13 experiences attraction toward the same sex finds a greater welcome and belonging in the 14 secular LGBT community instead of the church.⁵⁹

15
16 Having noted the potential dangers of expressions or emphases that could establish one's 17 primary identity or community on the basis of one's sexuality, one of the most important 18 questions that believers experiencing same-sex attraction have asked in recent years is: where 19 am I to find community, companionship, and belonging in this journey of discipleship? All 20 too often, Christians have been very clear on the “no” of same-sex sexual relationships, 21 without then offering a plausible pathway to deep and meaningful community for which we 22 were made (Gen. 2:18, Gal. 6:2, Heb. 10:24-25). Believers who experience same-sex
23 attraction often struggle with a deep-seated and crushing loneliness—a fear of never belonging 24 to another human being. Churches must be committed to being communities of welcome for 25 all sinners. For those repentant believers who know the struggle of same-sex attraction, our 26 churches may welcome them not merely as broken people to be ministered to, but also as 27 active and important participants and contributors in our communities. Like all yet-to-be-28 glorified Christians, those who struggle with same-sex attraction are commanded to walk with 29 the Lord in faith and repentance. Insofar as such persons display the requisite Christian 30 maturity, we do not consider this sin struggle automatically to disqualify someone for 31 leadership in the church (1 Cor. 6:9-11, 1 Tim. 3:1-7, Titus 1:6-9; 2 Pet. 1:3-11).

32
33 Our churches should seek to cultivate rich, Biblical friendships among people of the same sex.
34 Regardless of whether a person struggles with same-sex attraction, strong friendships with the 35 same sex are important components of a healthy Christian community. Far too often we act
36 as though, if a person is married, she or he no longer needs the same type of deep friendships

⁵⁸ There have been a number of productive online discussions about the origins, value, and place of sexual orientation as a category in our current culture. For example, see Michael Hannon's 2014 First Things essay “Against Heterosexuality” (<https://www.firstthings.com/article/2014/03/against-heterosexuality>), as well as responses from Steven Wedgworth (<https://calvinistinternational.com/2014/02/26/think-heterosexuality>) and Matthew Lee Anderson (<https://mereorthodoxy.com/meaning-of-heterosexuality>).

⁵⁹ As Rosaria Butterfield notes, “If you want to share the gospel with the LGBTQ community or anyone who will lose family and homes, the gospel must come with a house key. This hundredfold blessing promised here in these verses [Mark 10:28-31] is not going to fall from the sky. It is going to come from the church. It is going to come from the people of God acting like the family of God.” See “Why the Gospel Comes with a House-Key.” <https://erlc.com/resource-library/articles/why-the-gospel-comes-with-a-house-key> (accessed 04/26/2020).

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 that were needed before marriage or that single people need. Friendship is the proper category
2 for thinking of the type of close, intimate, same-sex relationships that Scripture upholds.
3 David and Jonathan, Jesus and John, Paul and Timothy—each relationship was framed by an 4 understanding of deep, committed, abiding friendship.

5
6 Recently some Christians who experience same-sex attraction have proposed celibate
7 partnerships as a way of adhering to the traditional sexual ethic while retaining certain
8 romantic elements of exclusive relationships. However, we find such practices to be unwise 9 and inconsistent with the depictions of deep same-sex relationships in Scripture, which are 10 instead cast in the context of familial or filial relations. Scripture frames our relationships
11 with fellow believers as familial (Mark 10:29-30, Titus 2; WCF 25.2)—the church is “a place 12 to love and be loved, a family in which to grow.”⁶⁰ While friendships can be deep and abiding, 13 they are not by nature romantic or exclusive. The attempt to retain aspects of the marital 14 relationship in the context of celibate partnerships is fundamentally a category mistake: it
15 seeks to have aspects of romance or marriage without its fullness, instead of rightly rooting 16 this type of deeply caring, same-sex relationship in its proper relational category of family or 17 friendship. The attempt to bring aspects of the marital relationship into a non-marital 18 relationship is itself a violation of the seventh commandment. While it is beyond the scope of 19 this Report to seek to sort out the specific lines between expressions of marriage, family, and 20 friendship, at its core these questions are issues of the heart and motivation—mature believers
21 should seek honest self-examination and the wisdom of others as they seek to remain faithful 22 to the commandment.

23
24 Our churches must be places where single people (who are called to a vocation of singleness 25 or who are simply currently single) can find deep and meaningful community if they are to be 26 places where those who are persistently attracted to the same sex can find belonging.⁶¹
27 Singleness should not be treated merely as a problem to be solved. For some it is a vocation 28 from the Lord whose expression in the service of the church provides resources that our 29 churches desperately need (1 Cor. 7:32, 38; WLC 138). The church ought to be a place which 30 proves to be a spiritual family for single people—part of the cure for the loneliness of the 31 single life.

32
33 The Confession rightly cautions against entangling vows of the single life (WLC 139).
34 Nonetheless, Christians with same-sex attraction who are pursuing chastity and yet do not
35 experience attractions to the opposite sex may properly be considered continent (WLC 138)
36 and may very well have an indefinite or life-long call to singleness. The perspective that the 37 only Biblical resolution to same-sex attraction is marriage is not a consensus perspective that 38 can be proven from our Standards nor does it seem to give proper regard to the rights and 39 dignity of both parties in the marriage relationship (Eph. 5:31; 1 Peter 3:7). While marriage is ⁶⁰ For an argument that believers struggling with same-sex attraction should find relational closeness primarily in the family of the church, see Rachel Gilson, Born Again This Way: Coming Out, Coming to Faith, and What Comes Next (Epsom, Surrey: Good Book Company, 2020).

⁶¹ For two recent treatments on being single as a Christian see: Sam Allberry, Seven Myths about Singleness (Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2019) and Barry Danylak, Redeeming Singleness: How the Storyline of Scripture Affirms the Single Life (Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2010).

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 one remedy “for preventing of uncleanness” (WCF 24.2), pastoral wisdom dictates that we 2 are sensitive to the fact that single persons often remain unmarried for a variety of 3 understandable reasons. When the single person embraces the gospel advantages of being
4 single, this is a charisma given by the Spirit for the edification of the body (1 Cor. 7:7, 32-35;
5 12:7). Regardless of whether the singleness of our people is temporary or persistent in this 6 life, an eschatological understanding of our sexuality recognizes that in the new heavens and 7 new earth, marriage will give way to a union of even greater intimacy with God and the 8 communion of saints (Matt. 22:30). Thus, single people in our churches can also help model 9 this eschatological reality for us in their daily faithfulness to God and service to his people in 10 the body of Christ.

11
12 Scripture and our Confession provide the core and essential resources for the pastoral care of 13 those who experience same-sex attraction. They give us unchanging theological principles 14 from which we must care for those in our churches for whom this is a struggle. In many ways, 15 the discourse around the various applications of these principles in our particular cultural 16 moment remains ongoing. Thus, we encourage our churches to hold firmly to the vision of 17 Christian discipleship put forth in the Scriptures and in our Confession while offering 18 compassionate pastoral care to those whom we are called to shepherd in our particular 19 contexts.

20
21 Finally, we rejoice with our brothers and sisters who, while experiencing ongoing attraction
22 to the same sex and living in a culture which would encourage them to embrace and act on 23 those attractions, instead pursue lives of faithfulness through chastity and obedience to Christ
24 by daily echoing Jesus’s words of “not my will, but yours, be done” with respect to their 25 sexuality (Luke 22:42). In this, they model for us all what it means to heed Jesus’ teaching:
26 “If anyone would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me”
27 (Mark 8:34). May it be that thanks to the finished work of Christ, and at the end of our 28 sometimes faltering and imperfect obedience, we each hear the divine accolade: “Well done, 29 good and faithful servant.”

1 APOLOGETIC APPROACHES FOR SPEAKING TO THE WORLD

2
3 GA Assignment: 1.e [Prepare a report which shall address...] suggested ways to articulate and 4 defend a Biblical understanding of homosexuality, same-sex attraction, and 5 transgenderism in the context of a culture that denies that understanding.
6

7 The 47th General Assembly requested that our committee report “...include suggested ways
8 to articulate and defend a Biblical understanding of homosexuality, same-sex attraction, and 9 transgenderism in the context of a culture that denies that understanding.” There is, then, a need
10 for a “sexuality apologetic”—a project of offering and defending the Christian understanding 11 of sex to a secular culture in ways that are as unmistakably clear but also as persuasive as 12 possible without any compromise.
13

14 What follows here is not written directly to a skeptic. It is an essay addressed to believers that 15 lays out the issues we will have to address and the questions to which we will have to provide 16 compelling answers.
17

18 THE CONTEMPORARY NARRATIVE OF SEXUALITY

19 20 In our culture sexuality is spoken of like this:
21

- 22 1. The oppression of the past. In the past, ancient cultures surrounded sex with all sorts of 23 taboos. In general, sex outside of marriage was forbidden in order to control women, to 24 help men protect their daughters and wives as their property.
25
- 26 2. The need for authentic expression. In modern times, however, we have come to believe 27 in the freedom and rights of individuals, including the right to love whomever we choose 28 in a consensual relationship. Science has shown us that sex is a healthy thing and a crucial 29 part of one’s identity. It is also a human right, and therefore we will only thrive and flourish 30 as human beings if that right to choose is equally available to all people.
31
- 32 3. The fight to love whom we want to love. Over the past century a number of brave 33 individuals—usually women, gay, and transgender persons—have heroically stood up to 34 the oppressive culture and said, ‘This is who I am! Don’t let anyone tell you who you can 35 or cannot love!’ Many of the early heroes of this movement were marginalized and many 36 died for their willingness to challenge the cultural elites.
37
- 38 4. The hard-won rights of today. But today we have a culture that affirms the right to have 39 sex outside of marriage, to conduct same-sex relationships and include them in the legal 40 institution of marriage, and to allow people to choose their own genders. In all these 41 changes we are forging the first human society in history which is sex-positive and in 42 which all persons can live as equal sexual beings.
43
- 44 5. The continual danger. Despite these great accomplishments, most places in the world, 45 and many places in our own society, still resist this healthy culture of sexual freedom and 46 justice. Indeed, there are those who would try to turn back the clock and roll back these rights. Under no circumstances must we allow regressive forces—the foremost of which is religion—to take this away from us again.

This modern moral story about sexuality creates a plot-line of a struggle between courageous heroes and bigoted, oppressive villains—all toward a happy ending. This particular moral story, however, is based on several beliefs that are not proven—only assumed. They are the modern understandings of freedom and identity, and as we will see, of history. Christians cannot speak to the world about sex in a compelling way if we merely answer the story with a list of moral imperatives, however Biblical. We must put the Christian sex ethic into a counter-narrative, one based on the Bible’s great story of redemption. And in order to do that, we must face three challenges.

THREE CHALLENGES FOR CHRISTIANS TODAY

Challenge 1: Addressing the modern identity narrative—unseen, deep background beliefs about identity and freedom/power.

The narrative of modern sexual liberation feels compelling to so many because it is based on background beliefs of identity and freedom which have been deeply instilled in us through cultural institutions for nearly three generations.

Identity. The Christian prohibitions about marriage, homosexuality, and transgenderism make no sense to most people because of their belief that sexuality is crucial for the expression of identity. And behind that belief is the very concept of the modern self.

In our culture sex is no longer seen as a way to honor God and to create and nurture new human life. Most believe something like this: “If you want to use sex for the development of new human life, that’s an option and your choice, but it’s not the primary reason people have sex. Rather, sex is for individual fulfillment and self-realization.” This modern view of identity is often called “expressive individualism”—the idea that deep within are feelings and desires that must be discovered and unlocked and expressed to become a true self. Identity is now found in one’s desires, while in the past it was found in one’s duties and relationships with God, family, and community.⁶² Determining—and acting on—your sexual desires is considered a key part of that process of becoming an authentic person.

Today, this view of identity is not conveyed with arguments but rather is presented as a simple given, not to be questioned. Slogans such as “be true to yourself” and “live your own truth” are repeated in countless ways verbal and non-verbal and sink deep into people’s hearts. Any other view is seen as psychologically repressive and therefore unhealthy.

But the modern self is extremely fragile. Because it is based on nothing but inward feelings, it is constantly changing from year to year or even month to month. Modern identity requires searching through ever shifting and often contradictory emotions and desires to determine a ⁶² See Robert N. Bellah, et al, Habits of the Heart: Individualism and Commitment in American Life, With a New Preface (Berkeley: University of California Press, 2008).

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

core “self.” And once you decide who you want to be, it is completely up to you to achieve it, no matter whether your family and community are supportive or not. So the modern self is highly performance-oriented and can be a crushing burden. An additional problem is that this view of identity requires a “soft relativism.” Our society teaches us to say, “Only I can determine right and wrong for myself,” even though, in the next moment our modern culture imposes a very definite set of moral norms on people. This is deeply contradictory, dictating moral absolutes while insisting that we are now liberated from all such truths. In all these ways the modern self and view of identity are unstable and problematic, however dominant they seem.

Freedom/power. To this individualist view of identity—which arguably has been growing in cultural influence since at least the early 19th century period of “romanticism”—has been added the post-modern view of freedom and power. It holds that power in culture is exercised through “dominant discourses”—namely, language and truth-claims—produced by those elites who inhabit the high places of status in culture. Everything we believe as good, true, right, and beautiful has been constructed by a particular culture’s “discursive systems.” We can only be free to create ourselves by “destabilizing dominant discourses.” For example, if we wish to include transgender people in society, it is believed, the way forward is not just to show compassion to individuals. Rather, we must deconstruct the very idea of a gender binary. Only then will transgender people have an equal place in society.

The problems with this post-modern view of freedom and power are as significant as the modern view of identity. It brings a self-contradictory “hard relativism.” If all social systems are chains of power forged through discourse—so that all truth claims and moral judgments are really just ways of exerting power—then why would one particular set of power-brokers be “wrong” or “unjust”? How could you determine which sets of socially-structured power relationships are unjust (and which are not) unless you had a non-culturally constructed, objective moral norm by which to judge between them? And where would such a transcendent moral absolute come from, if there is no God?

These contemporary views of identity and freedom are in many ways at odds with each other. (The view of identity is individualist and Freudian; the view of power is Marxist and Nietzschean.) Yet over the last 20 years they have been merged and become dominant and pervasive, particularly in our popular media. Romantic comedies, situation comedies, children’s cartoons, Disney’s and others’ movies for children—all lift these beliefs up and forge them into the heroic narrative of our time (the one spelled out at the beginning of this essay). The meaning of life is to determine who you are and to throw off the shackles of an oppressive society that refuses to accept and include you. It is this story that is to be our guiding light in making life decisions and is to serve as the shared value of a free society.

Arguably, Christians cannot make a plausible case for the Biblical sex ethic because in many ways we have adapted too much to—or even adopted—the contemporary views of identity and freedom in the way we preach and do ministry. Some have pointed out that the ethos of evangelical youth ministry has been highly emotivist for years. The emphasis has not been on Biblical theology and doctrine but almost exclusively on how Christ builds up our self-esteem

1 and meets our emotional needs. The prosperity gospel, churches and ministries without 2 membership and discipline, consumer-oriented mega-churches—all adapt heavily to the 3 culture of expressive individualism rather than challenging it.

4
5 Conclusion. As long as people in our culture hold these views of identity and freedom, they 6 cannot find the Christian view of sexuality plausible. And so no Christian sexuality apologetic
7 can have any real impact unless it spends time and effort to reveal the deeply problematic
8 nature of these background beliefs. In short, our sexuality apologetic cannot talk only about 9 sex. Only in a compelling, Biblical framework of identity, of being in Christ, and of 10 discipleship, of losing oneself in the love and service of God in order to find one's true self 11 (Matthew 10:39) will all of the Christian teaching about the meaning of sex make sense.

12
13 Challenge 2: Addressing the historical narrative—ignorance of the first (Christian) 14 “sexual revolution.”

15
16 As we saw above, the main cultural story about sexuality is to a great degree a historical 17 narrative—one that provides a “history of sex” that is now widely believed. It serves as 18 another layer of assumptions that frame modern people's responses to Christian views of 19 sexuality. Those who believe this account of our sexual history will not be able to find 20 Christian views plausible. We have been given a great deal of help, however, toward 21 exploding the popular history-of-sex myths in the ground-breaking scholarship by Kyle 22 Harper, From Shame to Sin.⁶³

23
24 History or Myths?

25
26 Popular history says: (a) The Roman world was a time and place of “polymorphous sexual 27 freedom” and “sexual diversity”;⁶⁴ (b) but Christianity came in with its highly restrictive sex 28 ethic, which it imposed through legislation. But Harper writes: “Over the last generation, as 29 the history of sexuality became one of the great scholarly enterprises, the popular story in 30 which Christianity put an end to pagan freedom with the body was exposed as a caricature, at 31 best.”⁶⁵ How so?

32
33 In the Greco-Roman world it was understood that while respectable women had to be virgins 34 at marriage and could have sex with no one but their spouses, husbands—and all males—were 35 expected to have sex with servants and slaves, prostitutes, poor women, and boys. Men could 36 essentially force themselves on anyone below them in the social order; they could have sex
37 with anyone but the wife of another man of status. This was, for men at least, a permissive sex
38 ethic. Why then, long before the Caesars became professing Christians, did the Church grow

⁶³ Kyle Harper, From Shame to Sin: The Christian Transformation of Sexual Morality in Late Antiquity (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2013). See also Peter Brown, The Body and Society: Men, Women, and Sexual Renunciation in Early Christianity (New York: Columbia University Press, 2008).

⁶⁴ Hillel Halkin, “The Persistence of the Oldest Hatred,” Review of How to Fight Anti-Semitism by Bari Weiss. The New York Times, September 10, 2019.

⁶⁵ Shame to Sin, 2.

1 rapidly as millions of people voluntarily adopted our faith's more restrictive standards for 2 sexual behavior? How could such a restrictive code have won out culturally?

3
4 The short answer is this: that while the pagan behavioral code was more permissive, at least
5 for men, the underlying logic or vision for sex propounded by Christians was vastly more
6 positive and humane than the pagan one.⁶⁶ And the practical outcome was far more protective 7 of the interests of both women and children. How so?

8
9 Every culture has a sexual morality, and that morality is grounded in beliefs about what sex is 10 for. A sex act is allowed if it meets that culture's telos (i.e., purpose) for sex and disallowed 11 if it does not. In Rome sexual morality was determined by the social status of the parties and,
12 therefore, by power. Sex was for the personal pleasure and enhancement of people with social 13 rank. The rightness or wrongness of sexual acts depended on whether or not they kept persons 14 in a right relationship with the polis, the social order and hierarchy. Those with more power
15 and social honor (men over women, high social status over lower social status) had more 16 sexual freedom than those with less.

17 18 The First (Christian) Sexual Revolution 19

20 Christianity, however, brought in the first sexual revolution in the West. Christianity changed 21 the “foundational logic” of sex so that “the cosmos replaced the city as the framework of 22 morality.”⁶⁷ Sex acts were judged as to whether or not they kept persons in a right relationship 23 with the cosmos, God's created and redemptive order. Christians' sexual behavior had to be 24 patterned after God's saving love for us. As God gave himself to us in Jesus Christ and we 25 give ourselves exclusively to him, so sex is to be practiced only within a life-long covenant of 26 marriage. As union with Christ bridges the gap and unites God and humanity, so sex is to be 27 practiced in a marriage uniting two different genders. (See below under Challenge #3.) In a
28 revolutionary break with the culture, then, Christians insisted that the rightness or wrongness 29 of sexual acts be determined not by social status and power but by covenantal love and gender 30 difference.

31
32 There was an immediate concrete result that all could see. By breaking the connection of sex 33 with the social order, Christianity guarded the vulnerable from exploitation. No man could 34 demand sex of a woman without giving up his independence and committing his whole life to 35 her. No man could demand sex from his servants. The vulnerable—women, slaves, and 36 children—were protected by the insistence that sex occur only within the safety of the 37 covenantal union of marriage. But beyond these practical results, the “underlying logic” of 38 Christianity regarding sex went much further and higher. It re-imagined sex as no longer a 39 mere appetite that we could barely control but rather as a joyous, even sacred, expression that 40 reflects the way God is saving the world.

⁶⁶ Harper writes that what happened as Christianity grew in the West was “a transformation in the deep logic of sexual morality.” Ibid., 7.

⁶⁷ Ibid., 8.

The Second (Modern) Sexual Revolution

How does the Christian sexual revolution relate to the second, modern “sexual revolution”?

First, it is important to recognize that the very humanitarian values of our culture—including its affirmation of sex and consent—come from Christianity. The modern emphasis on the goodness of the physical body and of sex, as well as on consent and mutuality (1 Corinthians 7:1-4) without a double standard for men and women, were Christian gifts to the modern world. Indeed, Paul’s statement that “the husband’s body does not belong to himself but to his wife,” just as the wife’s belongs to the husband, was a radical, unprecedented declaration in that patriarchal culture. Harper writes: “The social assumptions of pre-Christian sexual morality, such as the casual exploitation of the bodies of [powerless] non-persons, seem incomprehensible [to us today] precisely because the Christian revolution so completely swept away that old order....”⁶⁸ Harper here is referring to a growing body of scholarship demonstrating that the modern secular person believing fiercely in the equal rights and dignity of every individual is really borrowing a belief about human nature that originally developed from the Bible and grew out of Christian societies.⁶⁹

Second, we should realize that the modern movement of sexual liberation is in many ways retrograde, a turning back the clock to the underlying logic of Rome. Modern culture has broken the link between sex and God and re-attached sex to the social order. So sex is again detached from the requirement of life-long commitment in marriage. Sex again becomes about self-fulfillment instead of self-giving. As Harper notes, the modern sexual revolution retains some of Christianity’s gifts to the world, the concepts of consent and of the goodness of sex. So while not as brutal as it was in the older pagan culture (due to the remaining Christian elements), sexual culture today is still depersonalizing and objectifying. There are numerous studies and anecdotal evidence that people are far lonelier, with sex detached not only from marriage but even from personal relationship through the massive and elaborate empire of pornography. In ancient Rome there was usually one party—the party with power—using the other party as an object to satisfy his physical needs. Today often the parties are both using one another, treating the other party as an object to meet needs, to be related to only as long as those needs are being met.

Modern culture’s desire to retain some parts of the Christian sex ethic but not the others has created huge tension. The idea of consent goes best with covenant, not hook-ups.⁷⁰ Women in particular can feel used as objects. Early Christians faced the same charge that we do—that our sex ethic is stifling, kill-joy, negative, repressive, and unrealistic. They also knew that, while in the short run sexual self-control is hard, in the long run, the Christian sex ethic is more fulfilling and less dehumanizing. In our day we must also find ways to talk confidently about the revolutionary Christian good news about sex.

⁶⁸ Kyle Harper, “The First Sexual Revolution: Kyle Harper shows how Christianity transformed the ancient world,” First Things: A Monthly Journal of Religion and Public Life, no. 279, 2018, 41+. <https://www.firstthings.com/article/2018/01/the-first-sexual-revolution> (accessed 04/26/2020).

⁶⁹ See Larry Siedentop, Inventing the Individual: The Origins of Western Liberalism (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2014); Tom Holland, Dominion: How the Christian Revolution Remade the World (New York: Basic Books, 2019); Eric Nelson, The Hebrew Republic: Jewish Sources and the Transformation of European Political Thought (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2010); Brian Tierney, The Idea of Natural Rights: Studies on Natural Rights, Natural Law, and Church Law 1150-1625 (Grand Rapids, MI: Eerdmans, 1997); Charles Taylor, Sources of the Self: The Making of the Modern Identity (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1989) and A Secular Age (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2007).

⁷⁰ See Zoe Strimpel, “Why the Young are Falling Out of Love with Sex,” Unherd, November 26, 2019, which is a good look at “the state of modern sex.” Follow the links in the article to other empirical studies. <https://unherd.com/2019/11/why-are-the-young-falling-out-of-love-with-sex/?=refinnar> (accessed 04/26/2020).

Challenge #3: Rooting the church’s teaching about sexuality in its full theology, rather than simply declaring its ethic.

The Christian sex ethic can be stated with great economy and simplicity. “There should be no sex outside of marriage between a man and a woman.” Today most younger people will ask the question: “Why? Why is sex outside of marriage (or with someone of the same sex) wrong?”

Christian theology answers that sex is part of the image of God—it must image God and in particular his redeeming love. Sex is not about enhancing one’s power but about mutually giving up power to one another in love, as Christ did for us. The Christian answer to the question, “Why must sex be within heterosexual marriage?” gets us into the very heart of the gospel. We should not, then, present the sex ethic without rooting it in the Bible’s doctrines of God, of creation, and of redemption. Certainly Paul argues in this way. After reminding us that we are united with Christ by the Spirit (“He who is joined to the Lord becomes one spirit with him” 1 Corinthians 6:17), he immediately says in verse 18: “Flee from sexual immorality (porneia).” Why is sex outside of marriage wrong?⁷¹ We note that Paul does not merely say, “It is wrong because the Word of God says so” although he certainly could have done that. Rather, he writes “or do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit...?” (1 Cor. 6:18, 19)⁷² He is saying that sexual immorality is wrong because of our union with Christ, which must serve as the pattern for sexual union.

So what is sex for? It is a signpost pointing to God’s design of saving love, and it is a means for experiencing something of that same pattern of love at the horizontal level between two human beings that we know at the vertical level in Christ. Spelling this out—

GROUNDING THE PURPOSES OF SEX IN BIBLICAL THEOLOGY

A. As union with Christ is a relationship of exclusive, covenantal, self-giving love, so sexual intimacy is only to be experienced within the covenant of marriage.

There is no intimacy with God without entering into covenant with him, and so there must be no sexual intimacy without entering into an exclusive, permanent, covenant relationship with your spouse. Modern culture turns all sexual relationships into consumerist, transactional relationships. A consumer connection is about mutual self-fulfillment; the individual's needs are the non-negotiables and are more important than the relationship, which is provisional and easily terminated. A covenant, however, is based on mutual self-giving and putting the needs of the other party and the good of the relationship before your own. In marriage, spouses give up their independence for interdependence. They give their entire selves to each other—emotionally, physically, legally, economically. We must not “split the self” as modernity does, so sexual partners give their bodies to one another but not the rest of themselves.⁷³ The rule “no sex outside marriage” sounds “sex-negative” to modern people, but the opposite is the case. It elevates sex from a mere consumer good into a way to create the deepest community between two human beings—as well as a way to honor and resemble the One who gave himself wholly for us so we can be liberated to give ourselves exclusively to him.

⁷¹ The particular case of extra-marital sex Paul is addressing in 1 Corinthians 6 is sex with a prostitute (“Shall I then take the members of Christ and make them members of a prostitute? Never!” 1 Cor. 6:15). As we have seen, prostitution was extremely common in the Roman world and any new male convert would need pastoral guidance rooted in theology. But what Paul says here would hold for any sexual activity outside of marriage.

⁷² As one commentator puts it: “In fornicating...a [Christian] removes his body (which is a temple of the Spirit)...from union with Christ and makes it a member of her body...” Gordon D. Fee, The First Epistle to the Corinthians, The New International Commentary on the New Testament, ed. Gordon D. Fee (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1987), 262.

B. As union with Christ is a relationship between deeply different beings (God and humanity), so sexual intimacy is only to be experienced in a union across the deep difference of gender.

Ephesians 5:31-32 interprets Genesis 2:24 Christologically. Paul says that when God created the marital union he was doing so to give us a mysterion—a sign pointing to Christ's love and union with us. The male-female bond can only serve as an analogy to the Christ-Church union if the parties are significantly different. The wonder of our union in Christ is that humanity and deity—alienated by sin—are now united, first in the person of Christ himself, and then in our union with him through the Holy Spirit. And one of the great accomplishments of marriage is that the genders—also alienated by sin (Genesis 3:16-17)—are brought together in a loving union. The rule “marriage only between a man and a woman” sounds narrow to modern ears, but the opposite is the case. Homosexuality does not honor the need for this rich diversity of perspective and gendered humanity in sexual relationships. In one of the great ironies of late modern times, in which we celebrate diversity in so many other cultural sectors, we have devalued the ultimate unity-in-diversity—inter-gendered marriage. Male and female each have excellencies and glories, perspectives and powers, that the other gender does not have and cannot reproduce. As you could not have an entirely male or female society or church without impoverishment, neither can you have such a marriage.

C. As union with Christ brings new life into the world, so God has bestowed only on male-female marriage both the ability to create new human life and the best resources to nourish that life.

In Genesis 1 it is to human beings as male and female (v. 27) that God says “be fruitful and increase in number; fill the earth” (v. 28 NIV). It is only on this male-female union that God bestows the ability to produce new human life. In marriage, male and female form a deep unity with life-giving power. And if a marriage brings new lives into the world, the presence of both a father and a mother gives children deep, long-term relationships with and access to both of the gendered halves of humanity and therefore to the full range of human strengths and abilities. Again, this fits the pattern of our union with Christ. Just as the union of male and female produces the “fruit of the womb—a reward” (Psalm 127:3)—so the union of Christ with his people produces the fruit of new life in Christ, through conversion (John 15:16; Rom 1:13; Col 1:6,10) and growth into Christ-likeness (Gal 5:22-23).

⁷³ For a fascinating article by a non-Christian writer, who intuits parts of the Christian view of sexuality (the sacredness of sex and the unnaturalness of giving one's body without the rest of one's life) see Courtney Sender, “He Asked Permission to Touch, but Not to Ghost.” The New York Times, September 7, 2018. See also Stephen Sondheim's song “Marry Me a Little,” in which a deeply conflicted singer wants to keep individual freedom but still longs for the commitment and security of marriage. <https://genius.com/Stephen-sondheim-marry-me-a-little-lyrics>.

Summary. To recap: sex is (A) for self-giving, which is only complete if there is a life-long covenant, (B) for the bridging of difference across the barrier between male and female, and (C) for the creation and nurture of life. These theological purposes explain the ethic—why sexual intimacy is only to be experienced within marriage between a man and a woman.

TOWARD A CHRISTIAN SEXUAL APOLOGETIC

The Rationale for the Christian View of Marriage

How shall we proceed, then, with a sexual apologetic? First, while grounding the three purposes of sex in our Biblical theology, we should also connect them to existing cultural narratives, so as to both critique them and yet build on them.⁷⁴ So we can say to the world that Christianity understands sexual intimacy to be:

A. Super-consensual. Christians believe sexual intimacy is not for those who merely give temporary consent for one sexual encounter but for those who give permanent, whole-life consent to each other through marriage. And even inside marriage, sex must be mutually consensual (1 Cor. 7: 1-4). We believe this reflects how we know God—only through a covenant of exclusive love.

B. Gender diverse. Christians believe God distributed unique abilities, perspectives, and other gifts across the two genders. We do not believe that men can reproduce all the gifts women have nor that women can reproduce what men have. We believe a marriage between persons of the same gender fails to practice the gender diversity that we wish to see in other areas of life. We believe that the union of male and female in marriage reflects the union of God and humanity through Christ.

C. Capable of life. Christians understand as God’s will the biological reality that the sexual union of male and female can produce new human life. This is why we believe it is right to bestow the institution of marriage only on a male-female relationship. Not only is this relationship the one that produces new human life, it also then exposes growing children to the full range of our gendered humanity through the presence of both a mother and a father.

⁷⁴ This approach is a form of presuppositional apologetics, also called “contradictive or subversive fulfillment,” based on the apologetic approach of J.H. Bavinck. See Daniel Strange, Plugged In: Connecting Your Faith with What You Watch, Read, and Play (Epsom, Surrey: Good Book Company, 2019).

The Christian Counter-Narrative of Sexuality

- 1 1. *The brutality of sex in the old world. Greco-Roman society was the historic forerunner of 2 all western culture. In the ancient world sexual standards were very permissive. Sex was 3 seen merely as a way to enhance personal pleasure and fulfillment of those in power, and 4 so any sex was permitted if it did not upset the social order of the time—men over women, 5 owners over slaves, rich over poor. While wives could not have sex with others, their 6 husbands could have sex with most anyone they desired. This led to much brutality.
7
8
- 9 2. *A new personal identity. Christianity came into the world with a message of grace, namely,
10 that it was possible to have personal communion with God in a relationship of love as a 11 free gift through the work of Jesus the Son of God who died and rose again for us. This 12 message of salvation by grace rather than good works, morality, respectability, or pedigree
13 had a social-levelling effect. Christians who had social status in society stood in exactly 14 the same place as sinners in need of grace as did the social outsiders and moral failures 15 (cf. John 3 and John 4).
16
- 17 3. *A new social ethic. This new personal identity was unique. Christians' self-regard was not 18 based on performance or on how one was regarded by family or society. Culture's ability 19 to define believers' personhood was broken. It also meant Christians were all equal in 20 Christ—equally sinners in need of grace, and equally loved, justified, and adopted as 21 God's beloved children. This new identity had many practical effects. The Christian 22 community was the first multi-ethnic religious community,⁷⁵ which brought wealthy and 23 poor together in unprecedented ways. Relationships within the Christian community were 24 to be based on self-giving, sacrificial love, rather than on class and status.⁷⁶
25
- 26 4. *A new vision for sexuality. But one of the most striking applications of this new identity 27 and social ethic was in the area of sexual relationships. Christians called for sex to be 28 based not (as in the Roman society) on power but on love, to be captive not to the culture
29 but to Christ who gave himself for us and brought us into an exclusive, covenantal
30 relationship with him. Sexual love had to reflect God's saving love and this meant that sex 31 was shaped by two principles. First, the principle of self-giving. Just as salvation and 32 intimacy with God is only available inside an exclusive, life-long covenant relationship 33 with God, so sexual intimacy is only to be experienced within marriage. Second, the 34 principle of gender diversity. Just as salvation creates a union between God and 35 humanity—a unity across deep difference—so marriage brings together the different—36 male and female. Just as each gender has some glories and abilities that the other gender 37 cannot reproduce, so practicing gender-diversity in marriage combines the full range of 38 human excellencies and abilities.
39

⁷⁵ See Chapter 3, "A Different Identity," in Larry W. Hurtado, Destroyer of the gods: Early Christian Distinctiveness in the Roman World (Waco: Baylor University Press, 2016), 77-105.

⁷⁶ See the New Testament books of James and Philemon. See also the descriptions of hospitality and wealth-sharing in the accounts of the earliest church in Acts 2 and Acts 4.

- 1 5. *The failures of western society. When laws enforcing Christian sexual standards across a 2 whole country were disconnected from the animating high vision of Christ's love and
3 grace, a kind of "sex-negativity" indeed did grow, so that in many places all sex was seen
4 as shameful. Also, when Christian sexual mores are held by a largely nominal Christian 5 populace—without a keen sense of being sinners saved by sheer grace—those mores were 6 more often than not enforced very harshly, so that pregnant teenage girls or homosexual
7 youths were treated with cruelty. And often society's leaders not only violated their 8 professed morality, but used their power to coerce sex in the Roman way. Those without 9 power felt excluded and oppressed.
10
- 11 6. *The modern sexual revolution. The modern sexual revolution was to some degree a 12 reaction to this harsh regime. However, there is great evidence that the revolution is failing 13 in many ways. While contemporary people have maintained the idea of mutual consent 14 (an idea that came from Christianity), they have severed sex from whole-life commitment.
15 That means we have "turned back the clock" to the ancient world, where sex was for self-16 fulfillment rather than for loving self-giving. Sex becomes transactional, a consumer good 17 in which two parties exchange favors only as long as they are getting their needs met. The 18 results have been great numbers of people who are having sex but feeling used (and,
19 consequently, abandoning sexual intimacy for digital stimulation or other forms of 20 societally-approved satisfaction and distraction), of people who feel no need to marry and 21 have children, of people who feel lonely and detached as the numbers of people living in 22 families plummet. These trends are especially devastating to the poorest communities and 23 so, arguably, the modern sex ethic is hardest on those with the least power and societal 24 protections.
25
- 26 7. *The Christian sexual counter-culture. Christians still believe that sex must be rooted in 27 the larger story of God's saving love. Our culture tells us we must discover our deepest 28 desires and then express them in order to become our authentic selves. But the reality is 29 that we have contradictory impulses in our heart. We need some standard to help us 30 determine which of our desires and instincts should be cultivated and which ones should 31 not. Ancient people and modern people alike let their cultures set the standards.
32 Christianity says: don't let tribe or culture control you and give you your valuation. Let 33 God's Word give you the moral grid to understand your heart. And let God's love and 34 grace, through Jesus Christ, give you your deepest validation and identity. We believe that 35 this link between God's love and sexuality, that is lived out through the Biblical model of 36 marriage, is the best way for human beings to live and thrive.
37

SELECT ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY

The bibliography is arranged in three sections:

Books for Pastors and Sessions (12 citations)

Resolutions Adopted by PCA General Assemblies and Other Church Reports (15 citations)

Books and Articles for Further Study (16 citations)

We have included, first of all, books, reports, and statements that we believe can, as stated by the 47th General Assembly's Overture 42 from Chicago Metro Presbytery (as amended), "help pastors and sessions shepherd congregants who are dealing with same-sex attraction" and gender dysphoria. We have also included, in a separate section, "Books and Articles for Further Study" that are germane to the topic at hand or have played an important role in the debate within our fellowship surrounding questions of sexuality. Some authors found in this third section of the bibliography come from outside of our tradition and, as a consequence, hold some views that would not align with those presented in this Committee's Report. We have listed some of these works either because they include helpful insights or because they are relevant for pastors and sessions who wish to understand the nature of current debate within Christian communities that remain committed to clear Biblical directives regarding sexual behavior and human identity.

Recommendation of a work in this bibliography does not constitute endorsement of a given author's entire corpus, nor necessarily of the subsequent views of a given author. Likewise, the exclusion of a work from this bibliography does not constitute repudiation of an author's works or views. People's views change over time, and in some cases, we include one book by an author while excluding other books by that same author because we believe the views in the book recommended are helpful while the views in the books excluded are not as helpful.

Every book or article included in this bibliography should be read charitably and critically in light of the truths of Scripture, our Confessional standards, the pronouncements of the church, and other literature on the subjects addressed.

BOOKS FOR PASTORS AND SESSIONS

Allberry, Sam. Is God Anti-Gay? And Other Questions about Homosexuality, the Bible and Same-Sex Attraction. Purcellville, VA: Good Book Company, 2013.

The author is honest and transparent about his own journey of sexual brokenness. He proceeds to the topic less like a teacher and more like a friend. He treats the pertinent Biblical passages, and a hearty dose of the gospel makes them understandable and relational.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 Allberry, Sam. 7 Myths about Singleness. Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2019.

2
3 In this short, hope-filled book, Allberry affirms the goodness of marriage as a
4 picture of the gospel, while arguing that singleness demonstrates the sufficiency
5 of the gospel—especially in our cultural moment that places so much emphasis 6 on romance as the source of satisfaction. He argues against the myths that the 7 single life is too hard, that it means no intimacy or family, and that it wastes one's 8 sexuality, instead offering a picture of single life as a good gift from a good God.
9

10 Black, Nicholas. Homosexuality and the Bible: Outdated Advice or Words of Life? Greensboro, 11 NC: New Growth Press, 2010.

12
13 Black deals in concise and summary fashion with the major “revisionist”
14 arguments regarding the Bible’s view of homosexuality. A helpful introduction.
15

16 DeYoung, Kevin. What Does the Bible Really Say About Homosexuality? Wheaton, IL:
17 Crossway, 2015.

18
19 A helpful popularization of some of the more scholarly work on the exegetical 20 basis for the traditional interpretation of Scripture. Begins with Creation, 21 explaining the importance of a God-defined sexuality and the picture it presents
22 before setting up the contrast that homosexuality presents. An excellent resource 23 for those who need to be convinced of the Biblical support for historic Christian 24 understandings of sexuality.
25

26 Geiger, Tim. Explaining LGBTQ+ Identity to Your Child: Biblical Guidance and Wisdom.
27 Greensboro, NC: New Growth Press, 2018.

28
29 Geiger explains the categories associated with the LGBTQ+ acronym with an 30 understanding of common sin patterns. In doing so, he gives wisdom to help
31 parents prepare their children to extend the love of Christ in this world, 32 particularly to those struggling with same-sex attraction and/or gender identity.
33

34 Gilson, Rachel. Born Again This Way: Coming Out, Coming to Faith, and What Comes Next.
35 Purcellville, VA: Good Book Company, 2020.

36
37 Gilson demonstrates clear conviction regarding God’s love and trustworthiness
38 in this reflection on her move out of the gay community and gay relationships 39 toward Christ. She movingly tells of her embrace of a Biblical model for 40 relationships, which involved the risk of loving others in healthy friendships, in 41 the church, and eventually—for her—marriage to a man. She is laudably
42 vulnerable in sharing her story of redemption, encouraging all of us to follow 43 Jesus and trust Him with our own sexual brokenness.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 Grant, Jonathan. Divine Sex: A Compelling Vision for Christian Relationships in a
2 Hypersexualized Age. Grand Rapids, MI: Brazos Press, 2015.

3
4 Grant exposes key cultural practices that shape our sexual and relational lives, 5 unveiling assumptions regarding human sexuality that many Christians have 6 unknowingly adopted from the broader culture. He addresses how to train our 7 sexual impulses within God's will. Grant reveals how healthy relationships 8 provide a solid foundation on which we can launch legitimate and healthy sexual 9 relationships. His understanding of history and literary theory provides a rich 10 backdrop for the picture he paints of faithful discipleship in the realm of sexuality.

11
12 Perry, Jackie Hill. Gay Girl, Good God: The Story of Who I Was, and Who God Has Always 13 Been. Nashville: B&H Publishing Group, 2018.

14
15 Perry shares not so much advice but her own story. She shares deeply from her 16 heart and her own struggle to be faithful while experiencing same-sex attraction.
17 This is not a "how-to" guide but a worshipful narrative that leads us, same-sex 18 attracted or not, to find our identity and subsequent freedom in Christ and His 19 gospel work.

20 21 Pinson, Cooper. Helping Students with Same-Sex Attraction: Guidance for Parents and Youth
22 Leaders. Greensboro, NC: New Growth Press, 2017.

23
24 Cooper uses the Harvest USA model of gospel heart-change to help parents and 25 youth leaders understand and help, with sensitivity and wisdom, young men and 26 women who are struggling with same-sex attraction.

27
28 Roberts, Vaughan. Transgender. Purcellville, VA: Good Book Company, 2013.

29
30 In this very short book, Roberts lays out the foundational principles for a Christian 31 view of gender identity and a Christian response to transgenderism.

32
33 Shaw, Ed. Same-Sex Attraction and the Church: The Surprising Plausibility of the Celibate
34 Life. Downers Grove, IL: IVP Books, 2015.

35
36 Shaw's book seeks to provide a balanced treatment of same-sex attraction. Shaw 37 emphasizes the need for churches to create plausible pathways to faithfulness for 38 believers who experience same-sex attraction. Very pastoral and helpful for 39 discipleship. Shaw is strong on friendship and on suffering, both of which are 40 relevant for faithful Christians struggling with same-sex attraction.

41
42 White, David. Can You Change if You're Gay? Greensboro, NC: New Growth Press, 2013.

43
44 This short book deals with the controversial subject of change. White avoids 45 errors common to this topic by grounding the idea of change in the gospel.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY PCA GENERAL ASSEMBLIES AND OTHER CHURCH REPORTS
(Chronological Order)

- Resolution on Homosexuality. Adopted by the 5th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America (Overture 11, as amended), 1977. M5GA, 67–68. <http://www.pcahistory.org/pca/digest/studies/2-398.pdf>
- Declaration of Conscience. Adopted by the 21st General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America (Overture 16, as amended), 1993. M21GA, 129–132. See also Communication #4, M21GA, 133. <http://www.pcahistory.org/pca/digest/studies/2-399.pdf>
- Resolution on Homosexual Marriage. Adopted by the 24th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America (Personal Resolution 7, as amended), 1996. M24GA, 315–319. <http://www.pcahistory.org/pca/digest/studies/3-025.pdf>
- Resolution on the “Homosexual Agenda.” Adopted by the 27th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America (Overture 22, as amended), 1999. M27GA, 174–175. <http://www.pcahistory.org/pca/digest/studies/27GA-Ov22.pdf>
- “Pastoral Care for the Repentant Homosexual.” Report of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, Evangelical Synod’s Study Committee on Homosexuality, 1980. <http://pcahistory.org/rgo/rpces/docsynod/301.html>
- “Contemporary Perspectives on Sexual Orientation: A Theological and Pastoral Analysis.” Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America, 2011. <https://bapca.org/Contemporary-Perspectives-on-Sexual-Orientation-A-Theological-and-Pastoral-Analysis.pdf> or https://www.crownandcovenant.com/The_Gospel_Sexual_Orientation_p/ds535.htm
- Report of the PCA CMC Subcommittee on Homosexuality. January 24, 2015. M43GA, 331–333. http://www.pcahistory.org/pca/ga/43rd_pcaga_2015.pdf
- “‘From the Beginning’: God’s Design for Marriage.” Statement from the Anglican Church in North America, June 26, 2015. http://www.anglicanchurch.net/media/ACNA_College_of_Bishops_Statement_on_Marriage.pdf
- “Homosexuality and the Gospel of Grace: Faithfulness to the Lord’s Calling in an Age of Sexual Autonomy.” Missouri Presbytery, 2017. <https://mopres.org/resources/papers/201710-reportOnHomosexuality-corrected201906.pdf>

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 “Nashville Statement.” Council on Biblical Manhood and Womanhood, 2017. Declared by 2 the 47th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America to be “a biblically
3 faithful statement,” June 2019. (M47GA, pp. 76, 89, 112, 589).
4 http://www.pcahistory.org/pca/ga/47th_pcaga_2019.pdf. https://cbmw.org/nashville
5 -statement/

6
7 “Position Paper on Human Sexuality.” 37th General Assembly of the Evangelical
8 Presbyterian Church, June 2017. http://epcoga.wpengine.com/wp
9 -content/uploads/Files/1-Who-We-Are/B-About-The-EPC/Position
10 -Papers/PositionPaper-HumanSexuality.pdf

11
12 “Pastoral Letter on Human Sexuality.” 38th General Assembly of the Evangelical 13 Presbyterian Church, June 2018.
14 http://wrfnet.org/sites/default/files/EPC%20Pastoral%20Letter%20on%20Human%20
15 Sexuality.pdf

16
17 “Study Committee Report on 2018 Revoice Conference.” Central Carolina Presbytery, 2019.
18 http://www.ccpca.net/news/ccp_study_committee_report_on_2018_revoice_confere
19 nce.pdf

20
21 “Report of the Ad Hoc Committee to Investigate Memorial Presbyterian Church and 22 Revoice.” Missouri Presbytery, 2019. https://mopres.org/resources/papers/202001
23 -reportOnMemorialAndRevoice.pdf

24
25 “The Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church Position Statement on Human Sexuality.”
26 Minutes of the Two-Hundred Fifteenth General Synod of the Associate Reformed
27 Presbyterian Church, 2019, 31–37. http://arpchurch.org/wp-content/
28 uploads/2019/07/Human-Sexuality-Position-Statement-2019.pdf
29
30

31 BOOKS AND ARTICLES FOR FURTHER STUDY

32
33 Allberry, Sam. Why Does God Care Who I Sleep With? Purcellville, VA: The Good Book
34 Company, 2020.

35
36 In this accessible and short book, Allberry treats sexuality in general, and in so 37 doing provides helpful guidance for all members of the church. That guidance is 38 rooted in a Biblical anthropology and Biblical sexual ethics, with human sexuality 39 pointing ultimately toward the design and love of the Creator.

40
41 Barr, Adam T. and Ron Citlau. Compassion without Compromise: How the Gospel Frees Us
42 to Love our Gay Friends without Losing the Truth. Minneapolis, MN: Bethany
43 House, 2017.

44
45 Written by two pastors, one of whom (Citlau) used to be active in the gay lifestyle, 46 this book focuses on practical application. Whether everyone agrees with all their

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 practical advice, the tone is warm and winsome, while still clear on Biblical 2 principles.

3
4 Burk, Denny. What Is the Meaning of Sex? Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2013.

5
6 This is a good overview of a big subject—more of an introduction than a
7 comprehensive analysis. Given Burk’s active presence online and his leadership
8 behind the Nashville Statement, some will be predisposed to appreciate Burk’s
9 writing while others will be less sanguine, but his views are anchored in a high 10 view of the Bible and are accessible to a lay audience.

11
12 Butterfield, Rosaria. Secret Thoughts of an Unlikely Convert: An English Professor's Journey
13 into Christian Faith. Pittsburgh, PA: Crown & Covenant Publications, 2012.

14
15 Butterfield offers a compelling account of God’s grace at work in the life of a 16 former lesbian professor of gender studies. She gives credit where credit is due—17 to Jesus Christ, who drew her to Himself using an obedient pastor and his wife, 18 who loved her for years before she came to faith. Gets to the heart of the need of 19 all sinners for redemption and then reveals the Redeemer in the person of Jesus 20 (not in heterosexuality).

21
22 Danylak, Barry. Redeeming Singleness: How the Storyline of Scripture Affirms the Single 23 Life. Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2010.

24
25 In this unique treatment of singleness, Danylak seeks to demonstrate that the 26 entire story of Scripture affirms that the single life is a demonstrably good life.
27 Less a book about the experience of singleness or a how-to manual for the single 28 life, instead Danylak seeks to unpack a Biblical theology of singleness, wrestling 29 directly with the tensions across the Biblical narrative between the importance of 30 family life alongside affirmations of the goodness of the single life.

31
32 Fortson, S. Donald and Rollin G. Grams. Unchanging Witness: The Consistent Christian
33 Teaching on Homosexuality in Scriptures and Tradition. Nashville, TN: B&H
34 Academic, 2016.

35
36 Fortson and Grams provide a survey of the faithful witness of the Church over 37 the centuries on homosexuality as well a thorough treatment of Biblical passages 38 addressing homosexuality. A helpful scholarly resource.

39
40 Gagnon, Robert A.J. The Bible and Homosexual Practice: Texts and Hermeneutics. Nashville, 41 TN: Abingdon, 2001.

42
43 Gagnon’s work is the most comprehensive treatment of the exegesis of individual 44 texts on the subject of homosexuality. His scholarship is solid, though his tone is 45 at times less than pastoral.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 Harper, Kyle. From Shame to Sin: The Christian Transformation of Sexual Morality in Late
2 Antiquity. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2013.

3
4 Harper provides scholarly, historical background on the introduction of the 5 countercultural Christian sexual ethic into the ancient Roman world. For those 6 wanting to explore how Christianity overturned pagan sexual dynamics and 7 protected weaker parties—and hence was a religion of freedom, not oppression—8 this is an invaluable resource.

9
10 Hays, Richard. “Homosexuality.” In The Moral Vision of the New Testament: A Contemporary 11 Introduction to New Testament Ethics. San Francisco: Harper San Francisco, 1996, 12 379–406.

13
14 Hays is unequivocal in his presentation of Biblical prohibitions against 15 homosexual practice and provides good, introductory treatment of the key 16 Biblical passages. Perhaps because it was first published over 20 years ago, this 17 chapter does not take into account changes in terminology that have become the 18 focus of significant debate in the PCA, and Hays’s recommendations on public 19 policy questions are clearly rooted in the Wesleyan tradition out of which he 20 operates. Nevertheless, this is a helpful short introduction to the clear ethical 21 positions presented in the Biblical text.

22
23 Hill, Wesley. Washed and Waiting: Reflections on Christian Faithfulness and Homosexuality.
24 Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 2010; revised & expanded edition, 2016.

25
26 Part memoir, part biography, part theology, Hill’s writing is that of a Christian 27 who struggles with his own sexuality. Hill provides a nuanced treatment of the 28 topic which may prove helpful for those who are attracted to the same sex or want 29 a picture of what the cost of discipleship looks like for those with that experience.
30 Hill offers a different perspective on terminology than the authors of this Report
31 have adopted, and Reformed readers may have other objections to his approach, 32 but Hill preaches Christ and declares that his celibacy depends on him, while 33 asking good questions of the Church.

34
35 Pearcey, Nancy. Love Thy Body: Answering Hard Questions about Life and Sexuality. Grand 36 Rapids, MI: Baker Books, 2018.

37
38 Pearcey is strong on the sexuality debate as it interfaces with cultural and social 39 issues. She offers important insights on the spiritual nature of our bodies, helping 40 to distinguish Biblical from cultural perspectives.

41 Sprinkle, Preston. People to Be Loved: Why Homosexuality Is Not Just an Issue. Grand 42 Rapids: Zondervan, 2015.

43
44 Sprinkle takes a dynamic and thoughtful approach to dealing with the problems 45 of the same-sex attracted, writing from a pastor’s heart. He is objective and 46 careful in his approach to all sides. He is aware of the tensions surrounding debates on these questions—perhaps to a fault. But his careful linguistic and historic approach to Biblical teaching on the topic is valuable, and he affirms the historic Christian ethic on marriage.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

Stott, John. “Same-Sex Partnerships.” In Our Social and Sexual Revolution: Major Issues for a New Century, 3rd ed., 189–220. Grand Rapids: Baker Books, 1999.

Originally published in pamphlet form in the mid-1980s, Stott’s essay provides a helpful introduction to key texts and issues. Because it was first published over 30 years ago, it does not treat questions that have arisen in recent years—e.g., around terminology. Nevertheless, it is solid on the central issue of Biblical commands with regard to sexuality.

Stringer, Jay. Unwanted: How Sexual Brokenness Reveals Our Way to Healing. Colorado Springs: NavPress, 2018.

An insightful book on how to respond to sexual acting-out through pornography and adultery. Offers an alternative to the typical pressured and constrictive approach most Christian “purity” books have to offer. Celebrates healthy, Biblical sexuality and encourages us to enter into stories of sexual shame for insight to healing. Stringer, a minister and therapist, offers remedies to shame-inducing behaviors, bringing the gospel to bear on deep wounds. Stringer’s broad manner of dealing with sexual sin is applicable to all the sexually broken in the church.

Yarhouse, Mark A. Understanding Sexual Identity: A Resource for Youth Ministry. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 2013.

Primarily directed toward counseling adolescents who experience same-sex attraction. Presents in layman’s terms a sexual identity therapy (SIT) framework, employing secular psychological categories. Yarhouse’s strength, as a social scientist, lies in his observation of empirical phenomena. This book contains helpful insights when approached with appropriate Biblical discernment.

Yuan, Christopher. Holy Sexuality and the Gospel: Sex, Desire, and Relationships Shaped by God’s Grand Story. Colorado Springs: Multnomah, 2018.

Beginning with the garden, Yuan anchors our identity in the imago Dei. He argues that the Biblical-theological framework of sin is better than a sexual-orientation framework, which he sees as leading believers to being either “ex-gay” or “gay Christians.” Yuan offers a compelling picture of the Christian church as the central community for those who experience same-sex attraction, even if more could be done to expound a robust doctrine of gospel-shaped repentance. His approach to sexuality brings theological clarity, but some may find it simplistic or reductionistic at points.

CONCLUSION

We conclude this Report, as we began, with the prayer that the Scriptural solidarity and relational unity we experienced as a Committee will be reflected in how the Presbyterian Church in America receives what we have written. With the prayer that these materials may prove helpful for the unity, witness, and mission of our church and her people, we also offer a confession—

We confess that we began our work with the obvious understanding that members of this Committee were chosen to represent varying perspectives in our church. While we shared mutual respect, the polarities in our church and the expectations of various constituencies we represented created a certain wariness in our initial discussions. Two important commitments helped us advance beyond wariness of churchmen to the work of the church in a way that we believe honors the Lord: 1) the commitment of leaders to deal with one another honestly and honorably; and, 2) the commitment of each person on the Committee to be a learner, as well as a leader.

Each of us had things to learn: details, history, and implications of our Confessional standards; the pastoral challenges of those whose sacrificial ministries regularly involve ministering to those whose sexual sins our culture approves; the ways to get a hearing for the gospel from friends and neighbors who have adopted the pervasive cultural mindset; resources that equip us with additional knowledge and perspective to address one another and our culture with wise application of God's Word; and means to extend grace and truth to those with whom we disagree—even those in the church. These differing perspectives and pastoral obligations are reflected in the various sections of our Report that we pray will serve the varying concerns of ministry leaders across our church. The Lord blessed us by providing Committee members who could teach each of us, and by providing leaders who would listen without letting wariness become deafness to fathers and brothers serving the Lord in different capacities and contexts.

Just as we were clear-eyed about the differences among Committee members, we recognized that there are those outside our Committee who might presume that some sort of “group-think” became responsible for the unity of our Report. So, we also sent our key documents to trusted leaders, representing diverse perspectives across our denomination for commentary and critique. All provided honest and detailed responses that allowed us to discern some blind spots, address some issues with greater sensitivity or directness, and refine some language. No response was disrespectful. No response was disregarded. All responses proved helpful and were addressed in the final Report.

We received literally hundreds of suggestions for items to include in our Report from PCA constituencies. These included everything from reminders of important verses in the Bible to dense scholarly articles advocating perspectives on how to parse the language of those verses. Clearly there has been significant interest in the work of our Committee and significant concern that we be true to our Biblical, theological, historical, and pastoral obligations. The temptation under such scrutiny has been to write voluminously. We have tried—with marginal

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 success—to avoid that temptation. Our intention has been to serve the wider church with a
2 Report that we hope will be brief enough in its different sections to be useful for the differing 3 ministry tasks that must be undertaken by churches, sessions, pastors, and parishioners. We 4 still had to be comprehensive enough to address the many issues given to us by the General
5 Assembly, but we also tried to be succinct in our Preamble and Twelve Statements to give 6 readers an accessible view of the framework for our Biblical, theological, and pastoral 7 discussions.

8
9 For those who want to go into the theology of why unbidden desires remain sinful before God,
10 there is a theologically and Confessionally rich essay to engage your minds with those ideas.
11 For those who want to know how to pastor those who are struggling with same-sex attraction 12 and related issues, there is also an important section on how the church shepherds such 13 persons. And, for those who want to know how to speak to family and friends about how the 14 Bible's plan for loving relationships is not bigotry but beauty, there is an essay for how to 15 address modern culture.

16
17 Knowing that some have anticipated that our Report will divide and polarize our church with 18 recommendations that will try to press certain perspectives on others, we have made no 19 recommendations. The PCA asked the members of this Committee to study these issues, and 20 to express our understanding, and we have. Because of the consequences of a world-wide 21 pandemic, we have not yet formally presented this material to the General Assembly. Still, we 22 believe that our best service to the church will not be given by trying to leverage actions with 23 recommendations, but asking that our church's leaders experience what we have on this 24 Committee by listening with respect to what the Lord may intend to teach from those who 25 have sought to honor his Word and each other in this Report. There are and will be many 26 situations to which the principles and perspectives of this Report apply. We trust that the godly 27 leaders of local churches and presbyteries determined to declare the truth of Scripture and 28 share the grace of Jesus Christ are those best equipped to make such application.

ATTACHMENT A

47th General Assembly's Assignment to the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality
and
Summary of the 2019 Actions of the 47th GA on Overture 42

On June 27, 2019, in Dallas, the PCA's 47th GA adopted a recommendation from its 126-member Overtures Committee answering Chicago Metro Presbytery's Overture 42 in the affirmative, as amended (see below), and therein directed the Moderator to appoint the seven-man Ad Interim Study Committee.

Please Note:

- For the purposes of this Report and for ease of reference, the bulleted format of the Overture 42 resolution found in the GA Minutes has been altered to a numbered and lettered outline form.
- Any items in brackets below, and the footnote, are added for clarification and are not part of the 47th GA Minutes, p. 104.

Overture 42

1. Therefore, be it resolved that the 47th General Assembly create an Ad Interim Committee (AIC) to study the topic of human sexuality with particular attention to the issues of homosexuality, same-sex attraction, and transgenderism, and prepare a report which:
 - a. Shall include an annotated bibliography of resources on sexuality, which the Committee endorses, to help pastors and sessions shepherd congregants who are dealing with same-sex attraction;
 - b. Shall address:
 - (1) the nature of temptation, sin, repentance, and the difference between Roman Catholic and Reformed views of concupiscence as regards same-sex attraction;
 - (2) the propriety of using terms like “gay Christian” when referring to a believer struggling with same-sex attraction;
 - (3) the status of “orientation” as a valid anthropological category;
 - (4) the practice of “spiritual friendship” among same-sex attracted Christians; and
 - c. Shall include an analysis of WLC 138 and 139 regarding same-sex attraction, with careful attention given to the compatibility of the 7th commandment and same-sex attraction and the pursuit of celibacy by those who are attracted to the same sex; and
 - d. Shall include exegesis of the terms “malakoi” and “arsenokoitai” (1 Cor. 6:9); and

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

- e. Shall include suggested ways to articulate and defend a Biblical understanding of homosexuality, same-sex attraction, and transgenderism in the context of a culture that denies that understanding; and
 - f. Should the Committee conclude it prudent, may, as one of its recommendations, propose a statement on the topic; and
2. Be it further resolved, that, in its examination of Scripture and the PCA [sic] of Faith and Catechisms, the Committee consider studies and statements of other bodies outside and within the PCA, including, but not limited to:
 - the Council on Biblical Manhood and Womanhood's "Nashville Statement" [2017]
 - the RPCNA's "Contemporary Confession [sic] Perspectives on Sexual Orientation: A Theological and Pastoral Analysis" [2011 Synod; 43 pages]
 - the RPCES's "Pastoral Care for the Repentant Homosexual" [1980]
 - Missouri Presbytery's "Homosexuality and the Gospel of Grace: Faithfulness to the Lord's Calling in an Age of Sexual Autonomy" [2017 report; 53 pages]
 - Central Carolina Presbytery 2019 Study Committee Report on 2018 Revoice Conference [16 pp.]
 - the 2019 Missouri Presbytery Report on the Revoice Conference [143 pages]
 - the statements on homosexuality issued by the 5th, 24th, and 27th General Assemblies of the PCA and the January 14, 2015 Report of the [Cooperative Ministries Committee] CMC Subcommittee on Homosexuality [M34GA, Chattanooga, 2015, pp. 331-33]and resources recommended in those documents; and
 3. Be it further resolved, that the Moderator of the 47th General Assembly appoint the seven voting members who shall be either PCA teaching or ruling elders, and the Committee shall include at least three teaching and three ruling elders; and
 4. Be it further resolved that the Committee be permitted to recruit others to serve the Committee as advisors within the confines of its budget, with particular concern to secure advisors with experience in counseling those dealing with same-sex attraction and transgenderism; and
 5. Be it further resolved that the budget for the study committee be set at $25,000/year and that funds be derived from gifts to the AC [Administrative Committee] designated for that purpose; [see Summary of 2019 GA Actions, p. 57 below] and
 6. Be it further resolved that the committee shall present its report to the 48th General Assembly, including any recommendations it may present.
-

Summary of the 2019 Actions of the 47th GA on Overture 42

The 47th GA's Overtures Committee (OC) voted 72-54 to recommend the appointment of the Ad Interim Committee on Sexuality proposed by Overture 42, and by a voice vote, the GA adopted the OC recommendation. It was one of four Overtures proposing an ad interim committee on this subject, and the other three were answered by reference to the Assembly's action on Overture 42.

Prior to the GA discussion on Overture 42, several other overtures related to sexuality had already received lengthy debate (including some OC Minority Reports). This included 81 minutes devoted to the OC's recommendation to answer Calvary Presbytery's Overture 4 in the affirmative, which asked the GA to "declare the Nashville Statement to be a biblically faithful statement." See the GA archive titled "Thursday PM Program #2,"⁷⁷ where discussion on the OC recommendation on Overture 4 begins at timestamp 00:28:15 and ends at 1:49:00. This included a Minority Report to recommit, which failed by a vote of 572-792. The OC recommendation on Overture 42 was adopted by a vote of 803-541 (60-40%) (M47GA, 76, 89, 112, 589).

The subsequent GA floor discussion and action on Overture 42 took nine minutes. After OC chairman TE Sean Lucas presented the OC's recommendation (at about 11 pm Thursday), and, after a three-minute floor speech in favor, a motion was made to "call the question." The Assembly adopted that cloture motion, thus ending debate by a vote of 1216-85 (a 93% majority). The OC's recommendation on Overture 42 was then adopted by a voice vote. For the brief discussion on Overture 42, see same archive titled "Thursday PM Program #2," beginning at 1:53:00 and ending at 2:02:30 (M47GA, 77, 104-07, 701).

Funding - A question arose about whether the AIC budget should be recorded as $15,000 instead of $25,000, because $15,000 was the original amount in Overture 42, and it was the amount in the recommendation from the OC. However, the Assembly had already adopted Recommendation 6 from the AC Committee of Commissioners which read: "That, in the event the Assembly, upon recommendation of the Overtures Committee, answers Overtures 30, 42 and 44 in the affirmative, approving the establishment of an ad interim committee on the Study of Same-Sex Attraction, the budget of such committee be $25,000, to be provided solely by designated gifts to the AC" (M47GA 70,77, 184, and timestamp 3:39:00 in archived "Thursday PM Program"). Prior to the vote on the OC recommendation, the Moderator clarified that amounts contributed over and above any specific budget amount would still be useable by this Ad Interim Committee and that there was "technically no cap, per se" (Timestamp 1:54:50 in archived "Thursday PM Program #2").

⁷⁷ <https://livestream.com/accounts/8521918/events/8720909/videos/193106462>

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

ATTACHMENT B

Members of the 47th General Assembly
Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality (2019-2020)

Alphabetically

TE Dr. Bryan Chapell	Pastor, Grace PCA, Peoria, IL, Northern Illinois Presbytery (Chairman)
TE Dr. Kevin DeYoung	Pastor, Christ Covenant Church, Matthews, NC, Central Carolina Presbytery
RE Dr. Derek Halvorson	President, Covenant College, Lookout Mountain, TN Tennessee Valley Presbytery
RE Mr. Kyle Keating	Teacher and Dean, Providence Classical Christian Academy, St. Louis, MO Missouri Presbytery
TE Dr. Tim Keller	Pastor Emeritus, Redeemer NYC & Redeemer City-to-City Metro NY Presbytery
RE Mr. Jim Pocka	Licensed Professional Counselor, Dallas, TX North Texas Presbytery
TE Dr. Jim Weidenaar	Harvest USA & Assistant Pastor, First Reformed PCA, Pittsburgh, PA Pittsburgh Presbytery

TE Bryan Chapell, Northern Illinois Presbytery. BSJ, Northwestern University; MDiv, Covenant Theological Seminary; PhD, Southern Illinois University. TE Chapell began pastoral ministry at Woodburn Presbyterian Church in Woodburn, IL, in 1976 and subsequently pastored Bethel Reformed Presbyterian Church in Sparta, IL, 1978-1985. He became a professor of preaching at Covenant Theological Seminary in 1985, where he also served as Dean of Faculty (1987-1994), President (1994-2012), and Chancellor (2012-2013). On Easter, 2013, he became Senior Pastor of the historic Grace Presbyterian Church in Peoria, Illinois. Chapell was a founding member of the Gospel Coalition. He was the founder and is currently chairman of Unlimited Grace Media, a radio and online Bible-teaching ministry. His books include Christ-Centered Preaching, Christ-Centered Worship, Holiness by Grace, Praying Backwards, Each for the Other, and a children's book, I'll Love You Anyway and Always. Chapell was Moderator of the 2014 PCA General Assembly in Houston and is currently a member of the PCA's Standing Judicial Commission, Class of 2022. He and Kathy have four adult children and a growing number of grandchildren.

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 TE Kevin DeYoung, Central Carolina Presbytery. BA, Hope College; MDiv, Gordon-Conwell
2 Theological Seminary; PhD, University of Leicester. TE DeYoung has been Senior Pastor of 3 Christ Covenant Church in Matthews, NC, since 2017 as well as Assistant Professor of 4 Systematic Theology at Reformed Theological Seminary in Charlotte. Prior to moving to 5 Charlotte, he was Senior Pastor at University Reformed Church, East Lansing, MI. His Ph.D
6 focused on the theology of John Witherspoon, a Scottish-American Presbyterian theologian
7 and a Founding Father of the United States. Regularly blogging on thegospelcoalition.org,
8 DeYoung also has been invited as a keynote speaker to numerous conferences and lectures 9 including Together For the Gospel, The Gospel Coalition, Ligonier, and many more. He has 10 published more than a dozen books for adults and children, including Just Do Something, The 11 Hole in Our Holiness, and The Biggest Story. His book, Crazy Busy: A Mercifully Short Book
12 About a Big Problem, was named the 2014 Evangelical Christian Publishers Association Book 13 of the Year. In addition, Christianity Today awarded Book of the Year honors to three of his 14 books in 2009, 2010, and 2013. World Magazine named What Does the Bible Really Teach
15 About Homosexuality? one of its 2015 Books of the Year. He is a member of the General 16 Assembly's Committee on Administration, Class of 2022, and Chairman of the Board for the 17 Gospel Coalition. He and his wife Trisha have three daughters and five sons.

18 19 RE Derek Halvorson, Tennessee Valley Presbytery. BA, Covenant College; MA, University
20 of Arizona; PhD, Loyola University Chicago. RE Halvorson is Covenant College's sixth
21 president. After graduating from Covenant in 1993, Halvorson spent time trading foreign 22 currencies in Charlotte and Chicago. He returned to academia, earning advanced degrees in 23 history. From 2003 to 2009, Halvorson served at Covenant as Director of Constituent 24 Relations and then as Regional Director of Development. In 2009, he became President of 25 Providence Christian College, where he served until 2012, when he was appointed President 26 of Covenant College. Halvorson serves on the boards of the Chalmers Center for Economic 27 Development and the Council for Christian Colleges and Universities. He and his wife Wendy 28 have a son and a daughter. They are members of Lookout Mountain Presbyterian Church.

29
30 RE Kyle Keating, Missouri Presbytery. BA, Univ. of Illinois Champaign-Urbana; MDiv, 31 Covenant Theological Seminary. Keating serves as a ruling elder in the Missouri Presbytery.
32 After attending Covenant Seminary, he began teaching upper school history and theology at 33 Providence Classical Christian Academy, where he now serves as Dean. Keating regularly 34 speaks at churches and campuses on the plausibility of the biblical sexual ethic in the modern 35 age. He served as one of three REs on the eight-member Missouri Presbytery committee that 36 reported on Revoice and Memorial Presbyterian Church in 2019. Additionally, he served on 37 the Missouri Presbytery committee that issued the 2017 report titled "Homosexuality and 38 Gospel of Grace." He and his wife and fellow-teacher, Christy, live in St. Louis and have a 39 daughter.

40
41 TE Tim Keller, Metro New York Presbytery. BA, Bucknell University; MDiv, Gordon-
42 Conwell Seminary; DMin, Westminster Theological Seminary. TE Keller is the founding 43 pastor of Redeemer Presbyterian Church in Manhattan, which he started in 1989 with his wife,
44 Kathy, and three young sons. For 28 years he led a diverse congregation of young professionals 45 that grew to a weekly attendance of over 5,000. He is also the Chairman & Co-Founder of

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Human Sexuality

1 Redeemer City to City (CTC), which starts new churches in New York and other global cities,
2 and publishes books and resources for ministry in an urban environment. In 2017 Keller
3 transitioned to CTC full time to teach and mentor church planters and seminary students 4 through a joint venture with Reformed Theological Seminary's City Ministry Program. He 5 also works with CTC's global affiliates to launch church planting movements. Keller's books, 6 including the New York Times bestselling The Reason for God and The Prodigal God, have 7 sold over 2 million copies and been translated into 25 languages. Keller previously served as 8 the pastor of West Hopewell Presbyterian Church in Hopewell, Virginia, Associate Professor 9 of Practical Theology at Westminster Theological Seminary, and Director of Mercy Ministries 10 for the Presbyterian Church in America.

11
12 RE Jim Pocta, North Texas Presbytery. BA, University of Texas at Dallas; MA Counseling, 13 Amberton University. RE Pocta has been a licensed professional counselor for 12 years and 14 has practiced biblical counseling for over thirty years. He has his own biblical counseling 15 private practice specializing in depression, anxiety, sexual trauma, and abuse, as well as 16 helping those with same-sex attraction and being transgendered. A ruling elder at New St. Peters
17 Presbyterian Church in North Dallas, Pocta has been married to Linda (a recently retired RN) 18 for 40 years, and they have three sons and three grandchildren.

19 20 TE Jim Weidenaar, Pittsburgh Presbytery. MTS, Calvin Theological Seminary; PhD,
21 Westminster Theological Seminary. TE Weidenaar joined the Harvest USA staff in June 2012
22 as Director for the Greater Pittsburgh Region. His 2011 PhD. dissertation is titled: "Totum
23 Hominem Non Aliud...Quam Concupiscentiam: A Study of Calvin's Doctrine of Concupiscence 24 with Special Reference to its Place in His Soteriology." He lives in the eastern suburbs of 25 Pittsburgh with his wife and daughter.

THIS IS EXHIBIT "B"
REFERRED TO IN THE AFFIDAVIT OF
Colin Postma

SWORN BEFORE ME
IN ACCORDANCE WITH O. REG 431/20,
THIS 25th DAY OF JUNE, 2026.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Joel B. Proulx". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Joel" and last name "Proulx" clearly distinguishable. It is positioned above a horizontal line.

A Commissioner for Taking Oaths

THE
NEW REFORMATION
CATECHISM ON HUMAN SEXUALITY

by Christopher J. Gordon

A Catechism Based on the Heidelberg Catechism of 1563

Foreword

“I, with body and soul, both in life and in death, am not my own, but belong to my faithful savior Jesus Christ.” So begins the Heidelberg Catechism. Written by Zacharius Ursinus and published in 1563, The Heidelberg Catechism quickly became a manual for Christian living and religious instruction during the Reformation. A catechism focused on helping Christians lay hold of the deepest truths in the best ways was dearly needed during the tumultuous time of the Reformation.

Today’s revolution in theology is not over the doctrine of justification by faith alone, but over sexual identity. Our post-Freudian world maintains without any substantial pushback that sexual identity is the most important truth about a person. Organized under the banner of LGBTQ+, authentic personhood depends on placing yourself under one of these letters, or joyfully and without reservation applauding people who do. The American Medical Association tells us that mental health depends on practicing what you desire, and enthusiastically supporting others who do what feels right in their own eyes is a suicide-prevention strategy. The biblical creation mandate seems a quaint ancient narrative with no binding force when in the United States today there are hundreds of pediatric gender clinics and testosterone is administered to adolescents by Planned Parenthood on a first visit and without parental consent or a therapist’s note.

In contrast to the world’s anthropology, a biblical anthropology understands that after Adam’s transgression (Genesis 3), we, his posterity, have a sin nature that compels each person to love something that God hates. If nothing checks our will, our sinful desires will plunge us headfirst into all manner of spiritual, moral, and sometimes physical danger. No one is exempt from original sin and its consequence. Neither good nor malicious intentions can rewrite God’s call for men and women. Scripture is clear that we are responsible for our inborn as well as our actual sins (Psalm 5:5, Romans 1:18, Deuteronomy 27:15, Hebrews 9:27). Taking responsibility for our own sin is hard and necessary, but because of the way that the world, the flesh, and the devil conspire, it is difficult to know where to start.

And this is where Christopher Gordon’s The New Reformation Catechism offers to the church such a timely and pastoral guide. I have no doubt that this means of discipleship will give glory to God and be used by the Lord to liberate many who are held captive by sexual sin. Twenty-three years ago, when I was in a lesbian relationship and at the same time reading the Bible, I would have greatly benefited from The New Reformation Catechism on Human Sexuality. I know that I am not alone in needing this catechism.

May God bless you richly as you grow in Christian liberty. May this catechism help you hold fast to the truth and better understand how the full counsel of God speaks to the godly priority of human sexuality.

– Rosaria Butterfield

Table of Contents

Foreword

Preface

Introduction | Questions 1–2

Part One: Creation | Questions 3–15

Part Two: Fall | Questions 16–22

Part Three: Redemption | Questions 23–26

Part Four: Restoration | Questions 27–41

Preface

The historic creeds and confessions of Protestant churches have served to preserve Christians in the truth of the gospel for centuries. We are deeply indebted to those who took the time to formulate, with great accuracy and clarity, the precious truths of our faith. We are faced with a unique challenge in our times, however, with regard to new movements that are harming the integrity of what we believe.

Of particular interest is how the current sexual revolution has completely overturned what God established at creation as good. This is a unique challenge that has been answered by many helpful writers on the topic. The problem is that not enough Christians are taking the time to read current books that address this issue. Further, few resources are available that are intended to bring families, study groups, and churchgoers together around confessional-like statements that address the challenges of our day.

Creeds and confessions were originally written to provide summary truths of the Christian faith in the face of great theological error. Catechisms in particular provided short, concise summary statements, in question-and-answer format, on some particular doctrine of the Christian faith. These documents are intended to help Christians, especially children and those new to the faith, to have their minds trained in what Scripture teaches on a given point of Christian doctrine. To this day, catechizing is one of the most effective methods of preserving Christians from error.

The culture is daily catechizing us and our children in the ideas they want impressed upon minds. It has been to our own demise that Christians have not taken seriously enough the call to combat this vicious assault on our faith through catechizing God's people in his truth. The great need of the moment is a robust recovery in training Christians in the truths of what we confess.

Many of our older confessional statements do not address our current challenges with any amount of specificity. Sadly, due to the fear that any new confession or catechism will challenge the integrity of the confessional statements that we already have, or compromise our present unity, we have avoided the writing of new confessions or catechisms that address current issues.

What is not appreciated, however, is that catechisms in particular were regularly written by Reformed pastors in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Richard Greenham, the great Elizabethan Puritan preacher, second only in influence to William Perkins, wrote a well-known short form of catechizing on the basic principles of the Christian faith. Greenham produced a masterful catechism that helped to provide further clarity on issues that were not specified in ecclesiastically approved Reformed creeds and confessions.

This is precisely the purpose of the present catechism that is being presented to you. There are official, ecclesiastically approved creeds, confessions, and catechisms of the church, that have official authority and serve the churches in the preservation of the truth. This catechism is not an official, ecclesiastical document and does not have the same authority. As a Reformed minister, I have written a pastoral catechism based on the Heidelberg Catechism of 1563 to help Christians have their minds catechized in the truth of biblical human sexuality.

This catechism is intended to be used devotionally around the table, providing an opportunity for parents to talk with their children about these issues. This catechism is also intended to provide opportunities for Bible studies, Sunday school classes, and sermon series for pastors in addressing the current challenges surrounding human sexuality.

I have submitted this catechism to many well-respected scholars and pastors to receive feedback and correction where needed. In particular, I would like to thank Rosaria Butterfield, Christopher Yuan, R. Scott Clark, W. Robert Godfrey, Carl Trueman, David VanDrunen, Michael Brown, Doug Barnes, Wes Bredenhof, Chad Vegas, Mark Stromberg, Jonathan Cruse, and Jon Payne for their excellent help in producing this catechism.

I hope you will receive this, dear reader, as a humble attempt to help Christians enjoy the creational, sexual ethic that God established from the beginning for our good.

– Christopher J. Gordon
Escondido, CA

INTRODUCTION

1. Q Why is it comforting that we have a new identity in Jesus Christ?

A. I am being remade into the image of Christ, to have a true identity¹ in body and soul, throughout the whole course of my life, to enjoy God and glorify him forever.²

He redeemed my life with the precious blood of his Son,³ and has delivered me from the lie of Satan in the Garden.⁴

He also watches over me in such a way that he might free me from all sexual impurity as the temple of his indwelling;⁵ in fact, all things must work together to remake me into the image of his Son.⁶

Because I have this new identity,⁷ Christ, by his Holy Spirit, also assures me of God's steadfast love,⁸ and makes me wholeheartedly willing and ready from now on to enjoy true freedom as a new creation.⁹

2. Q What must I know about human sexuality and my new identity in Christ?

A. Three things: first, how great my unholy desires and sexual sins are;¹⁰ second, how I am set free from bondage to my unholy desires and sexual sins;¹¹ third, how I am to lead a thankful life of sexual purity in union with Christ.¹²

PART I: CREATION

3. Q How many sexes did God make at creation?

A. God made two sexes at creation; "in the image of God, he created them, male and female, he created them."¹³

4. Q What does God require of us in making us in his image?

A. God requires that we love him as he created us, male or female, with all our heart, soul, mind, and strength, and our neighbor as ourselves.¹⁴

5. Q Why did God make us male and female in his own image?

A. That we might use all of the excellent qualities¹⁵ with which he made us,¹⁶ in true righteousness and holiness,¹⁷ in body and soul,¹⁸ as male and female, for his glory as we exercise dominion over the earth.¹⁹

6. Q But aren't we able to make a distinction between biological sex and gender in search of our identity?

A. No. God established a natural order in the creation of male and female, that is good for us as image bearers of God.²⁰

To introduce gender as a new category of personhood, separate from the biological category of sex, in pursuit of a different sexual identity,

QA1

1 Gen. 1:26-27; Rom. 8:29; 2 Cor. 3:18; Col. 3:10
2 Ps. 146; 1 Cor. 10:31
3 1 Pet. 1:18-19; 1 John 1:7-9; 2:2
4 Gen. 3:4-5; John 8:34-36; Heb. 2:14-15; 1 John 3:1-11
5 1 Cor. 3:16; 1 Cor. 6:15-20
6 Rom. 8:29; 2 Cor. 3:18
7 2 Cor. 5:17
8 Ps. 103:8-10; John 16:25-27
9 John 8:32; Gal. 5:13

QA2

10 Ex. 20:14, 17; 2 Sam. 11:2-4; Gal. 5:16; 1 John 2:16
11 2 Sam. 12:13; Ps. 51; 1 Cor. 6:14-23; Col. 2:13-15
12 1 Cor. 6:15-20

QA3

13 Gen. 1:26-27; 2:18, 21-23; 5:2; Matt. 19:4-5; Mark 10:6-7

QA4

14 Lev. 19:18; Deut. 6:5; Matt. 22:37-40

QA5

15 Ps. 8:3-9
16 Ps. 100:3
17 Eph. 4:23-24
18 1 Thess. 5:23
19 Gen. 1:26-27; Ps. 8:3-9

QA6

20 Gen. 1:26-31; 9:6; Ps. 8:3-8; James 3:9
21 Gen. 1:31; Ps. 100:3; Rom. 1:21-27

is unnatural to the creation order, and harmful to the purpose for which God made us.²¹

7. Q. But aren't some people born sexually indeterminate?

A. A small percentage of people are indeed born sexually indeterminate, but such are, by definition, anomalies, and in medicine anomalies never negate objective categories of personhood.

We may not use the existence of anomalies to change or redefine the creational order that God has established as good.²²

8. Q. Does God permit us to change our sex?

A. Certainly not.²³
To reverse how God created us as male or female, due to fallen, unchosen thoughts and self-perceptions would be an act of rebellion,²³ and a gross distortion of God's creative handiwork in specifically forming us for his own glory.²⁵

Further, in the new Jerusalem, any genital mutilation,
or confusion over sexual orientation identity,
will be restored in our new resurrection bodies.

Therefore, we should not change our sex since God promises to glorify our bodies, in everlasting happiness,
as he created us male and female,
in the final resurrection.²⁶

9. Q. When was marriage instituted?

A. The holy bond of marriage was instituted by God at the very beginning of history in creation.²⁷

10. Q. What is marriage?

A. God created marriage to be a lifelong, monogamous covenantal union between one man and one woman.²⁸

11. Q. Why did God institute marriage?

A. Six reasons:

First, a husband and wife are meant to live together in sincere love and holiness, helping each other faithfully in all things.²⁹

Second, marriage provides husbands and wives with a proper setting to enjoy each other with the physical and relational desires God gave to them.³⁰

Third, by marriage the human race is to be continued and increased through the institution of the family.³¹

Fourth, a structure is provided that enriches society and contributes to its orderly function.³²

Fifth, by marriage God advances his kingdom through the loving devotion of a husband and wife, as children are nurtured
in the true knowledge and fear of the Lord.³³

Sixth, marriage is designed to represent

QA7

22 Gen. 1:26-27

QA8

23 Lev. 18:21-19:28; Deut. 23:1; Ps. 51:3-6

24 Col. 3:5; 1 Thess. 4:5

25 Gen. 2:7, 22; Ps. 100:3

26 Phil. 3:20-21; 1 Cor. 15:35-56; Rev. 21:1-8

QA9

27 Questions 9-13 are adapted from the URCNA Statement of Affirmations Regarding Marriage: www.urna.org/file_retrieve/63166; Gen. 2:18

QA10

28 Prov. 2:17; Mark 10:6-9; Eph. 5:25-32

QA11

29 Eph. 2:18; Eph. 5:21-25

30 Gen. 2:23; Heb. 13:4

31 Gen. 1:22, 28; 8:17

32 Gen. 1:26-28

33 Gen. 1:28; Ps. 127:3; Mal. 2:15-16; Eph. 5:22-6:4

the mystery of Christ and the church that he loves.³⁴

12. Q Does the Lord permit sexual intimacy outside of marriage?

A. No. Scripture teaches that marriage is the only acceptable context for sexual union.

Further, God calls us to live decent and chaste lives within or outside the holy state of marriage.³⁵

13. Q What is the Christian position on divorce?

A. Since husbands and wives are united by the Lord's hand, nothing should separate them in this life.³⁶

14. Q But aren't there any biblical grounds for divorce?

A. The Scriptures permit divorce in the irreconcilable circumstances of adultery or abandonment.³⁷

But these are exceptions to the general rule not to divorce.

15. Q Does God permit same-sex marriage?

A. Absolutely not. God ordained marriage only between a man and a woman for life.³⁸

Governments do not have the authority to change marriage into something contrary to what God instituted at creation.³⁹

PART II: FALL

16. Q With what lie did Satan tempt our first parents in the garden?

A. Satan lied about the goodness of God's creation order.

He presented God as restrictive and oppressive, and our first parents chose to sin through the desire to become their own gods and define their own way.⁴⁰

17. Q What happened to our desires in the fall of our first parents, Adam and Eve, in paradise?

A. All the desires of the human heart, even though they may be unchosen, have become distorted and fallen in the sin of our first parents.⁴¹

These desires cannot be trusted,⁴² since we have a natural tendency to be led away by various passions.⁴³

18. Q But didn't God create us to be happy in following the desires of our hearts?

A. God made us holy and happy;⁴⁴ we, however, accepting the lie of the devil,⁴⁵ have robbed ourselves of this happiness by obeying sinful desires.⁴⁶

19. Q But isn't there a difference between temptation and the practice of evil desires?

A. God requires that we avoid

QA11

34 Eph. 5:25

QA12

35 Gen. 2:21-24; Ex. 20:14; 1 Cor. 7:1-2; Eph. 5:3-5; Heb. 13:4

QA13

36 Gen. 2:21-14; Matt. 19:6; Mark 10:7-9

QA14

37 Matt. 19:1-9; 1 Cor. 7:10-17

QA15

38 Gen. 2:24; Lev. 18:22; Matt. 19:5; Mark 7:21; Rom. 1:24-32; 1 Cor. 6:9; Eph. 5:31
39 Acts 5:28-29; Rom. 13:1-2

QA16

40 Gen. 3:1-7; John 8:44; 1 John 2:22

QA17

41 Gen. 3:16; Jer. 17:9; 1 John 2:16
42 Rom. 7:14-25
43 2 Tim. 3:6; Gal. 5:24; Eph. 2:3

QA18

44 Gen. 1:31; Ps. 8:6-9
45 Gen. 3:6
46 Gen. 3:16-19; Ps. 14; Rom. 3:10-18

entering into all forms of temptation.⁴⁷

Temptation is not sin when it originates outside of us.⁴⁸

Temptation becomes sin
when we entertain and welcome the sinful desires of our hearts and act upon them.⁴⁹

20. Q Are we able to make a distinction between entertaining a sinful desire and choosing to live in that desire?

A. God condemns desires that are contrary to his law, as well as our actual sins.⁵⁰

These contrary desires are sinful even if they are unchosen, since they proceed from a corrupt heart.⁵¹

All impure thoughts and desires, prior to the conscious act of the will,
are considered sin in God's eyes.⁵²

21. Q What kinds of sinful desires and deeds does God's law condemn?

A. Christ teaches us this in summary in Matthew 15:18-20: "But what comes out of the mouth proceeds from the heart, and this defiles a person.
For out of the heart come evil thoughts, murder, adultery, sexual immorality, theft, false witness, slander. These are what defile a person."

22. Q Will God permit our sinful desires to go unpunished?

A. Certainly not.
He is terribly angry with our sinful desires,
as well as our actual sins,

God will punish every idle thought, careless word,
or wicked action
by a just judgment both now and in eternity.⁵³
As the Bible declares,
"For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, so that each one may receive what is due for what he has done in the body, whether good or evil."⁵⁴

PART III: REDEMPTION

23. Q What has Jesus accomplished for me in the gospel with regard to all forms of sexual sin?

A. Through true faith in the promise of God's Word,⁵⁵ and wholehearted trust in Christ,⁵⁶
by the gospel,
God has freely granted—not only to others but to me also—the forgiveness of all my sexual trespasses,⁵⁷ canceling all my guilt⁵⁸ and meriting for me eternal righteousness and salvation.⁵⁹

24. Q How does the truth of the gospel set us free with regard to sexual sin?

A. Since I died, was buried, and have been raised with Christ⁶⁰
through his death and resurrection,
I am set free from slavery to any form of sexual sin.

Christ has broken its dominion over me,⁶¹ and I now live with a renewed desire⁶² to reckon myself dead to my old way of sexual

QA19

47 Matt. 6:13
48 Gen. 39:6-12; Matt. 4:1-10
49 Gen. 3:6; 4:6-8; 2 Kings 5:20-27

QA20

50 Prov. 6:25; 7; Matt. 5:28; 1 Cor. 10:6; Gal. 5:16
51 Matt. 15:19; James 1:15
52 Rom. 2:15-16; 8:5; Eph. 4:17-19; Rev. 2:23

QA21

QA22

53 Matt. 12:35-37; Rom. 1:18-32; 2:16; Rev. 20:11-15
54 Cor. 5:10

QA23

55 John 17:3,17; Heb. 11:1-3; James 2:19
56 Rom. 4:18-21; 5:1; 10:10; Heb. 4:14-16
57 Col. 2:13-14; 1 Cor. 6:13-14

58 Col. 2:14; Heb. 2:14

59 Rom. 1:16-17; Heb. 10:10

QA24

60 Rom. 6:1-4
61 Rom. 6:5-14
62 Heb. 8:10-12; Col. 3:1-5 immorality,⁶³

but alive to God in pursuing a sexually pure life for his glory.⁶⁴

25. Q Since I am no longer my own but have been bought with the precious blood of Christ, what new identity has Christ achieved for me?

A. By faith I am joined to Christ as a new creature,⁶⁵ and so I share in his identity.⁶⁶

In my new identity,
I am satisfied in God's love as his adopted child;⁶⁷
I am to think of myself as purchased, accepted, valued, and protected;⁶⁸
and I am to find it a great delight to be remade in the image of Christ in true righteousness and holiness.⁶⁹

26. Q Why are all forms of sexual immorality incompatible with my union with Jesus Christ?

A. Since I have become one with Christ in body and spirit, any form of sexual immorality invites that which is profane into my holy union with Christ.⁷⁰

Therefore, I am called to be one with Christ by fleeing all forms of sexual immorality.⁷¹

PART IV: RESTORATION

27. Q What does God call us to do when we fall to sexual sin?

A. When I commit any form of sexual sin—even the slightest desire or thought contrary to any of God's commandments—
I should confess my sins to him,⁷² eagerly turn away from all sexual sin,⁷³ and seek to walk in the newness of life.⁷⁴

28. Q Is God angry with his children who still struggle in their striving to put away sexual immorality?

A. God is merciful and gracious, slow to anger,
and abounding in lovingkindness.⁷⁵

When we come to God with a broken and contrite heart,⁷⁶
confessing and turning away from our sins, God promises to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.⁷⁷

He has declared,
“a bruised reed he will not break, and a faintly burning wick he will not quench.”⁷⁸

29. Q What about believers who fight against same-sex attraction but continue to experience shame and guilt for these desires?

A. God, in the gospel of his Son, has announced that there is no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus.⁷⁹
Any unholy desire, even if unchosen,

QA24

63 Rom. 6:21; Eph. 5:1-17
64 Rom. 6:11

QA25

65 Eph. 1:7-14
66 Gal. 3:28; Eph. 1:9-11; Rom. 8:29; 2 Cor. 5:17
67 Rom. 8:16-17; 9:26; Eph. 2:19; 5:1
68 Rom. 8:32; 2 Thess. 2:16; Rev. 1:15
69 Eph. 4:22-24; 1 Pet. 1:8

QA26

70 1 Cor. 6:15-20
71 1 Cor. 6:18; 1 Thess. 4:3

QA27

72 Ps. 1; 32:5; 2 Sam 12:13; 1 John 2:9
73 1 Cor. 6:18; 1 Thess. 4:3
74 Rom. 6:4; 7:6; Col. 3:1-5

QA28

75 Ps. 103:1-14
76 Ps. 34:18; 51:17

77 Rom. 4:6-8; 1 John 1:9

78 Isa. 42:3

QA29

79 Rom. 8:1
80 Col. 2:13
81 1 John 1:9
82 Rom. 6:4; Col. 3:1-5
83 2 Sam. 12:1-13; Luke 15:1-2
84 Jude 22; 1 Pet. 3:8
85 Gal. 6:2

such as same-sex attraction, is covered by the blood of Christ.⁸⁰

Believers who continue to struggle against same-sex attraction, should trust in God's forgiving mercies,⁸¹
and with earnest purpose, by the strength of the Holy Spirit, strive to live in the newness of life.⁸²

Further, the body of Christ should not avoid or shun those who struggle against any sexual sin.⁸³
Instead, believers, with a spirit of compassion,⁸⁴ should "bear each other's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."⁸⁵

30. Q Since we have been delivered from all sexual sin, why should we pursue a life of sexual purity?

A. Five reasons:

First, because our sinful desires do not define us or constitute our identity as those purchased by the blood of Christ.⁸⁶

Second, because sexual purity is the will of God for our sanctification,⁸⁷
as we are being renewed by the power of the Holy Spirit into the image of God's Son.⁸⁸

Third, by pursuing a life of sexual purity, we show that we are thankful to God for his salvation.⁸⁹

Fourth, we also stand as witnesses, that those living in sexual immorality might see in us the holy purity that God loves.⁹⁰

Fifth, as we battle against our sinful nature, the Holy Spirit strengthens our Christian walk and we give glory to God.⁹¹

31. Q What is pornography?

A. Pornography is a lustful desire of the flesh, activated through the channel of the eye,⁹² through the looking upon or distributing of naked images of males and females for the purpose of sexual arousal.⁹³

32. Q Why is pornography so destructive?

A. Because the use of such images ruins the sexual intimacy intended for marriage,⁹⁴ supports idolatry in the worship of the creature,⁹⁵ dehumanizes men and women promoting abuse, especially of women,⁹⁶
advances other forms of sexual impurity,⁹⁷ creates idleness in society to the harm of our neighbors,⁹⁸ and degrades the mind into darkness.⁹⁹

33. Q Can those be saved who do not turn to God from their unholy desires and are unrepentant of their sexual ways?

A. By no means.
Scripture tells us that no sexually immoral person, no adulterer,
no fornicator,
no homosexual,
no abuser of women,
or the like will inherit the kingdom of God.¹⁰⁰

QA30

86 1 Cor. 6:20; 7:23; 1 Pet. 1:17-18
87 1 Thess. 4:3
88 Rom. 8:29; 1 Cor. 3:16; 6:19
89 Rom. 6:13; 12:1-2; 1 Pet. 2:5-10
90 Matt. 5:14-16; Rom. 14:17-19; 1 Pet. 2:12; 3:1-2
91 1 Cor. 10:31; Gal. 5:17

QA31

92 Job 31:1; 1 John 2:16
93 Matt. 5:28; 1 Cor. 7:9

QA32

94 Eph. 5:25; Heb. 13:4
95 Rom. 1:24-25
96 Gen. 1:26-27
97 Rom. 1:18-27; James 1:14-15; 2 Pet. 2:14
98 2 Thess. 3:6-12
99 Rom. 1:28-32; Eph. 4:18-19

QA33

100 1 Cor. 6:9-10; Gal. 5:19-21; Eph. 5:1-20; 1 John 3:14

34. Q What is involved in genuine repentance of all sexual sin?

A. Two things:

The dying-away of the old self,
by hating all forms of sexual immorality and fleeing from it;¹⁰¹

And the rising-to-life of the new self, by finding great joy in leading a sexually pure life and, if married, by properly loving our spouses.¹⁰²

35. Q How should husbands seek to love and honor their wives?

A. Husbands should demonstrate sincere love to their wives, in reverence for Christ,¹⁰³
through the exercise of:
loyalty, kindness, understanding, tenderness, self-control, sexual purity, by all means avoiding verbal and emotional abuse or controlling behavior, and by providing godly leadership.¹⁰⁴

Men ought to be a good example to their wives of the love that Christ has for his church.¹⁰⁵

36. Q How should wives seek to love and honor their husbands?

A. Wives should demonstrate sincere love to their husbands, in reverence for Christ,¹⁰⁶
through the exercise of:
respect, patience, honor, encouragement, self-denial, contentment

and by finding delight in godly submission that pleases the Lord.¹⁰⁷

Women ought to be a good example to their husbands of the responsive love that the church has for Christ.¹⁰⁸

37. Q How should singles honor the Lord in the situation that God has called them?

A. Singles who desire marriage are called to contentment and prayer;¹⁰⁹ trusting the Lord in every circumstance¹¹⁰ as he knows best for us, yet realizing that only Christ makes us fulfilled, and that ultimate joy is found in Christ whether as single or married.¹¹¹

Singles who do not desire marriage, are called to holiness in body and spirit,¹¹² in the special opportunities they have to give “undivided devotion to the Lord,”¹¹³ yet, should remain open to God’s will to provide a spouse and change one’s desire for marriage.

38. Q How should the family be maintained to the glory of God?

A. By making Christ the center of our homes through:
love, humility, and patience toward one another;¹¹⁴ godly discipline,¹¹⁵
the regular reading of the Scriptures,¹¹⁶ heartfelt prayer,¹¹⁷ removing all things spiritually harmful from our homes,¹¹⁸ and making Lord’s Day worship a priority together.¹¹⁹

QA34

101 2 Cor. 5:17; Eph. 4:22-24; Col. 3:5-10; 1 Cor. 6:15-20
102 Ps. 51:3, 12; Isa. 57:15; Rom. 6:1-11; Eph. 5:22-33

QA35

103 Eph. 5:21
104 Gal. 5:22-26; Eph. 5:25-33; Col. 3:19; 1 Pet. 3:7
105 Eph. 5:25; Col. 3:19

QA36

106 Eph. 5:21
107 Prov. 31:10-31; Eph. 5:22-24; Titus 2:1-5; 1 Pet. 3:1-4
108 Eph. 5:28-30

QA37

109 Phil. 4:11
110 Prov. 3:5-7
111 Prov. 18:22

112 1 Cor. 6:6-8

113 1 Cor. 7:34

QA38

114 Eph. 4:25-32
115 Eph. 6:1-4
116 Deut. 6:6-9; Col. 3:16; 1 Tim. 4:13
117 1 Thess. 5:17
118 Josh. 24:15; 2 Kings 23-24; Eph. 4:31
119 Heb. 10:25

39. Q. What is God's will for parents in training children in proper sexuality?

A. Three things:

First, that parents model before their children a loving relationship, and also hold marriage in honor as it was designed by God.¹²⁰

Second, that parents speak to their children appropriately and sufficiently about biblical sexuality, and proper sexual conduct, as designed for marriage;¹²¹ realizing that our children are facing daily misinformation on sexuality.

Third, that parents guard their children from all forms of sexual immorality and pornography,¹²² and overseeing the use of technology, social media, and other mediums that promote, through cultural peer pressure, a different sexual ethic¹²³ than what God made as good in creation.¹²⁴

40. Q. What is God's will for young adults in honoring their parents in sexual conduct?

A. Three things:

First, that young adults honor their parents by maintaining sexual purity and chastity.¹²⁵

Second, that young adults refrain from pushing upon their parents and adopting the ungodly sexual norms of the culture.¹²⁶

Third, that young adults take delight in the Lord and in their identity in Christ as singles, waiting patiently for the spouse that God prepares for them.¹²⁷

41. Q. How do we love those who live in sexual sin?

A. We should not avoid or shun those who are mastered by sexual sin.¹²⁸ Instead, we should speak the truth in love¹²⁹ about sexual sin, repentance, and faith in Christ; give witness to the deliverance God gave us from our own sins;¹³⁰ and perform acts of kindness.¹³¹ By our godly living, we should seek to win over our neighbors to Christ.¹³²

Rev. Christopher Gordon pastors the Escondido United Reformed Church (EscondidoURC.org) is the host of Abounding Grace Radio, a daily half hour, thoroughly Reformed, radio program you can also listen to online, at AGRadio.org. His catechism is reprinted here with the gracious permission of the author and the Gospel Reformation Network (GospelReformation.net).

QA39

120 Eph. 5:21-25
121 Prov. 5; 7; 22:6, 15
122 Job 31:1
123 1 Thess. 4:3
124 Deut. 6:6-9

QA40

125 Ex. 22:16; 1 Cor. 6:18-20; 7; Heb. 13:4
126 Deut. 21:18-21; Prov. 29:15; 30:17; Col. 3:20; 1 Tim. 3:1-4
127 Gen. 2:22-23; Prov. 18:22

QA41

128 Luke 15:1-2; Matt. 9:13
129 Eph. 4:15
130 Mark 5:19; 1 Pet. 3:15
131 Matt. 5:34-46; Luke 14:12-14; Rom. 12:13; Heb. 13:16; 1 Pet. 4:9
132 Matt. 5:14-16; Rom. 14:17-19; 1 Pet. 2:12; 3:1-2